A Flying Vanderbilt
Two Were Tired of Life
In and Out of Who's Who Had He Beaten a Dog

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1934, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.

The original Commodore Vanderbilt, who ran a little boat from Staten Island to the mainland, then became the country's biggest railroad man and head of the New York Central, would be interested to know that his great grandson, William K. Vanderbilt, according to Mr. Maury Paul, has built a big airplane for his personal travel. His branch of the Vanderbilt family will be independent of railroads, even of yachts, except for ocean crossings.

W. K. Vanderbilt as a youth did a great deal to encourage the development of the American automobile industry. He built the automobile parkway on Long Island, organized the first great automobile races that encouraged automobile building and better automobiles. Now he takes to airship building, a good way to spend part of the money accumulated by the original commodore.

Hector Fuller of New York, next to Grover Whalen, the ablest official "greeter" of New York City, was chosen by Mayor Walker to stand at the city hall entrance to tell distinguished arriving guests how happy New York was to see them.

Time passes, birthdays accumulate; Mr. Fuller discovered that he was 70 years old, with things not as they had been, and he killed himself. You hope that somebody "greeted" him on another shore.

Old men applying for work here in these days: "Sorry, nothing to offer." That makes gas through a tube seem easier than life.

Another, sadder, case of these "suicide days" was the death of a 21-year-old girl, who poisoned herself. Her name is omitted. She wrote to her family: "Not being able to have what I want I have done this," and asked that "his letters and my poetry" be buried with her, and that he, "Joe," also be buried with her. He had told her that he would kill himself.

Police say that "Joe" is alive and well so far as they know, with no intention of committing suicide. For two years he had been secretly married to the unhappy girl. She thought he was surely going to kill himself and wrote: "I must go with him." She will be disappointed.

"Men have died, and worms have eaten them, but not for love."

The British "Who's Who," out today, gives Hitler two lines. Frances Perkins is not in the book, although Greta Garbo is in, and Upton Sinclair, with a full account of his "EPIC."

Those left out must console themselves with the fact that Leonardo Da Vinci, in all his writings, did not mention Christopher Columbus, and the Duke of St. Simon in his long memoirs, makes only one little mention of Voltaire, merely because "he was the son of my father's notary."

He was also the father of the French Revolution, which put an end to the importance of French dukes. But St. Simon could not know that.

At Tivoli, N. Y., the courtroom cheered when a jury acquitted a teacher, 27 years old, for beating a 13-year-old boy with a rubber hose and allegedly hitting him with his fist. The man admitted using the rubber hose, but denied using his fist.

Had he admitted beating a young dog with a rubber hose, the courtroom would not have cheered.

Senator Huey Long of Louisiana says he has enrolled 1,460,000 Americans in his "share-the-wealth" plan.

That seems a small figure for a plan to divide big fortunes. New York and Chicago had thriving "share-the-wealth" organizations before Senator Long started his. Some original gentlemen with share-the-wealth inclinations are in Atlanta penitentiary, some in a Colorado prison, some on Alcatraz Island, in the bay back of San Francisco.

Senator Borah says: "Reorganize the Republican party, make it liberal, bring in the young men." Mr. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, an "oldish" gentleman, says he will do nothing of the kind. The party is all right.

It is like two partners owning a hansom cab quarreling about repainting or not repainting it. That would make no difference. The Democratic taxi is the thing just now, running at high speed, with billions of real money exploding inside the engine. Republican hansom cabs are out of date. Even if the Democratic taxi stopped for lack of financial gas, the Republican hansom cab would hardly come back.

ELY, CROOKER CLASH OVER TUCKERMAN QUESTION

The public hearing on Governor Ely's appointees to the new racing commission ended abruptly in the State House today.

The end came in the midst of a verbal clash between Governor Ely, who was presiding, and Attorney Conrad W. Crooker, who led the demand for the public hearing on confirmation of General Charles H. Cole, William H. Ensign and Charles F. Connors.

Crooker withdrew and the Governor announced the hearing was ended.

Members of the Governor's Council, including Lieutenant-Governor Gaspar G. Bacon, took part in the clash that led to the hearing's close. Three hundred spectators listened to it.

Cancer Dies Under New Serum

By Associated Press

London, Dec. 5—Discovery of a serum which kills cancer cells after they have been removed from the human body, and does no injury to healthy human tissue so removed, was announced here today by Dr. Thomas Lumsden, director of the London Cancer Research Laboratories.

Lumsden, one of the best known among conservative cancer scientists, said the serum cannot at present be used on human beings. He reported his discovery to the court of governors of the London hospital.

The serum, Dr. Lumsden reported, was obtained from the blood of an animal after cancerous cells from an animal of a different species had been implanted.

The report, stating that Dr. Lumsden and his co-workers are engaged in refining the serum, concludes:

"The most that can be said is that this line of research offers distinct encouragement. It might be mentioned that there is no evidence that cancer is due to a germ or is infectious in the general sense."

200,000 Tons of Rock Drop Off Niagara

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Dec. 5—A slice of rock estimated to weigh 200,000 tons dropped from a table rock of the Canadian Falls here late last night to change the contour of the huge cataract for the second time within five months.

No water was falling over the table rock when the huge block broke and plunged into the gorge on the Canadian side. The new break was believed to have been from 50 to 60 feet long and about 100 feet wide. The rock which fell was a part of a sector on which spectators often stood to view the wonder of nature when they came here.

More Planes Join Hunt for Fliers

HOPE FADES FOR THREE AT SEA

By Associated Press

Honolulu, Dec. 5—Into a dark drizzling dawn, 27 planes took off from Wheeler Field today to resume search for Flight Lieutenant C. T. P. Ulm and his two companions, with only a "bare chance" they could find the Australian fliers who were forced down at sea yesterday in their flight from Oakland, Cal.

Twenty-four Naval planes and three Army ships roared into the overcast skies. Aviators, experienced in flying the stretches of water between the islands, said it would be "a miracle" if the searching planes were able to sight the lost fliers, considering weather conditions.

One aviator doubted that, except by accident, the searchers would find the men, even if they were certain to be within a known area of 50 miles square, adding "that's 2500 square miles to search over. There's a bare chance, no more."

A chance, and it was considered slim, still existed that Ulm, his co-pilot, George Littleton, and navigator, J. Leon Skilling, may have been picked up by a slow Japanese sampan, several hundred miles at sea. Because the sampans are not equipped with radio, news of such a rescue would be delayed.

If the fliers had managed to reach shore their presence would be almost immediately reported, since the islands are all connected by radiophone.

Tells How 'Baby Face' Died

From Mrs. Helen Gillis, widow of slain "Baby Face" Nelson comes the first story of how the killer died after his battle with U. S. Agents. Her story, told to a sister, reveals that the bad man of the Dillinger gang died crying a few hours after the gun battle. The widow drove the body of the gangster to a lonely road and left it in the roadway. She didn't put it in a ditch because "she wanted to make 'Les' comfortable," she said. Prosecutor On Stand In Speer Inquest

By JOHN H. NOONAN

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Greenfield, Dec. 5—In a surprise move, District Attorney Joseph T. Bartlett, prosecuting the secret inquest into the murder of Dr. Elliott Speer, took the witness stand himself today and all other witnesses were dismissed until the afternoon session.

The nature of Bartlett's testimony could not be learned. He directed the questioning of 72 witnesses, including all members of the Mt. Hermon school faculty, during the early investigation of the shotgun slaying of the headmaster in September.

The district attorney took the stand after two other witnesses had testified and there had been a startling development outside the courtroom.

Wilfred W. Fry and John L. Grandin, Boston attorney, president and vice-president of the school trustees, were the witnesses preceding Bartlett.

It is understood they gave testi-

NELSON DIED CRYING, WIDOW REVEALS

By International News Service

Chicago, Dec. 5—Mrs. Juliette Fitzsimmons, sister of the slain George ("Baby Face") Nelson, today revealed the story of his death as, she said, it was told to her by his widow, pretty 25-year-old Mrs. Helen Gillis, shortly before the latter was taken into custody by federal men on Thanksgiving Day.

Nelson died, she said, in a bed in a house "somewhere near Chicago" whither he had been taken by his wife and an unnamed man after he was wounded in a vicious gun battle near Barrington, Ill., last Tuesday.

Mrs. Gillis (Nelson's real name was Gillis) told Mrs. Fitzsimmons that she, Nelson and the other man were in a house near Lake Geneva, Wis., for 10 days until federal men raided it a week ago yesterday. They fled through a back door. [illegible]

Speeding toward Chicago and a widespread net laid by federal agents for their capture, the fugitives engaged in a [illegible] gun fight with one pair of agents without harm to either party.

Mrs. Fitzsimmons quoted Mrs. Gillis as saying: [illegible]

"The Federal men fired on us as we passed them."

A short time later they met another government car manned by Herman E. Hollis and Samuel P. Cowley near Barrington.

Mrs. Gillis' description of what happened then agreed with previous accounts. She insisted, however, that she took no part in the firing.

The Federal men's fire disabled Nelson's car, she said, by cutting the gasoline supply. During that outbreak, Mrs. Gillis told Mrs. Fitzsimmons:

Could Almost Feel Bullets Whizzing Past Her Face

"I could almost feel the bullets as they whistled by my face."

Gillis, his wife and the unidentified man abandoned their disabled car and faced the Federal men.

There, Mrs. Fitzsimmons quoted Mrs. Gillis as saying:

"'Les ("Baby Face") hollered for me to duck. I jumped in a ditch and kept my head down. I could see Les, though, firing at the Federal men who were trying to kill him.

"'Then I saw Les jump up and grab his side. I seemed to know then that it was all over. Then the firing stopped.'"

Mrs. Gillis said she then saw either her husband or the other man, she didn't know which, go over to make sure that Hollis and Cowley were out of the fight. She told her sister-in-law:

"Afterwards when I watched Les I knew he was done for."

Mrs. Gillis said she knew there was no use calling a doctor.

The trio successfully evaded other police who were searching the countryside and made their way to the house "somewhere near Chicago." There they stripped Nelson of his clothing. Mrs. Gillis told Mrs. Fitzsimmons:

Reveals How Ruthless Killer Breaks Down and Weeps

"All three of us knew that Les was dying. But there was nothing we could do.

"After a while, Les said to me:

"'It's is getting dark Helen—say boodbye to mother.'

"Then he talked about our children. He broke down and cried. Then he said:

"'It's getting darker, Helen, I can't see you any more.'"

Mrs. Gillis said it was 7:35 that evening when Nelson died. All that night, the young widow and the other man kept vigil.

Finally dawn broke and, Mrs. Gillis said:

"We carried Les' body to the car to find some place to put it. I had no idea where to go.

"We drove out to Niles Center, near a cemetery and I decided that was the best place to leave Les' body. We didn't put his body in a ditch. We put it alongside the road. I wanted Les to be comfortable."

GERMAN MUSIC WORLD IN CRISIS; GREAT CONDUCTORS QUIT

BITTER ROW OVER JEWISH COMPOSER ENDS IN UPROAR

Berlin, Dec. 5—The German music world was plunged into a crisis today when, upon the heels of the abandonment of all his official artistic connections by Dr. Wilhelm Furtwaengler, one of the world's greatest orchestra conductors, Dr. Erich Kleiber resigned as leader of the state opera.

Under a barrage of criticism because he defended the composer, Paul Hindemith, Dr. Furtwaengler quit as conductor of the famous Berlin Philharmonic orchestra, and as deputy president of the Reich Chamber of Music.

Kleiber's wife, the former Ruth Goodrich of California, confirmed the news of her husband's resignation.

This will also mean the resignation of Dr. Hindemith as professor at the state medical high school, around whom the quarrel centers, she said.

The new crisis reaches back to November 25, when Dr. Furtwaengler published a newspaper article defending Hindemith.

Furtwaengler denied Hindemith was a Jew, declaring he was a pure Aryan and one of the foremost typically German composers, "behind whom is the entire musical youth of modern Germany."

"Hindemith," Furtwaengler wrote, "has done more the world over to make German music respected than anyone else."

Premier Hermann Wilhelm Goering announced he had refused to accept Kleiber's resignation, but it was significant that he will not conduct tonight.

Before Tragedy Invaded Speer Home

PROSECUTOR IS ON STAND IN SPEER QUIZ

mony concerning the two mystery letters produced by the suspect in the case, one of which, purporting to have been written by Dr. Speer, is held by police to be a forgery.

The development outside the inquest was information given investigators that a Mt. Hermon faculty member had attempted to coerce another witness into changing a story he already had told police.

The witness' testimony, regarded as all-important by investigators, related to the movements of the suspect in the case between 8 and 9 o'clock on the night that Dr. Elliott Speer was slain.

Accused by this witness was one of three members of the Northfield community, who, according to officials, have been trying to build up an alibi for the suspect during the nine weeks of the murder probe.

It was learned that the witness told authorities the faculty member "tried to put words in his mouth" and have him make his own testimony agree with the stories of six faculty members.

SUSPECT LOCATED

The witness' story placed the suspect in the case at a point three and one-half miles from the Speer home 15 minutes after the killing.

This faculty member and five others have placed the suspect on the campus at the time. As the state police murder theory goes, the absence of the suspect after the murder is a convicting point.

Welles said that his daughter, Mrs. Speer, was bearing up well under the daily ordeals of testifying. His words also shed light why she goes back into the inquest room each day. He said:

"Mrs. Speer had never been fully aware of Dr. Speer's problems or worries. He was not a man who was given to indicating that he had any troubles.

"This past Summer, I know from my own experience that he was hardly ever in any but seemingly a gay and light-hearted mood. He always displayed great interest in the affairs of his wife and other persons, rarely talking of his own troubles."

NEW SIGNIFICANCE

It was then learned that when investigators first talked with the murdered headmaster's widow, she was able to help them but little, knowing little of what they sought.

But, as the inquest continued and new records were taken, they were repeated for Mrs. Speer.

A lot of remarks that seemed but chance remarks at the time, Dr. Speer uttered them, have since, in the light of new evidence, taken on a more important aspect to Mrs. Speer.

She has been enabled, by gaining knowledge of what authorities are aiming at, to recall and interpret some of the things her husband had referred to casually, but never explained, it was said.

WRITTEN IN ADVANCE

Fry, who was in the inquest witness room for the second day, is believed to have discussed in detail the two Speer letters which police claim as important evidence of the suspect's premeditation in the murder.

It was disclosed that these letters were turned over to Fry within 48 hours of the death of Dr. Speer. One of them spoke in glowing terms of the man who is now regarded as Dr. Speer's killer.

Police authorities are convinced that the suspect prepared these letters himself in advance of the murder.

In one, they point out, although Dr. Speer was supposed to have been the author, many words and phrases, almost foreign to the slain headmaster, were used.

It was said that when police first received these letters, the suspect, on being questioned, said that they were copies. Search was then started for the originals. Dr. Speer's file failed to reveal that he had written any such letter or letters.

Furthermore, police contend, a check of the accounts of the Mt. Hermon school disclosed that Dr. Speer was actually traveling at the time the eulogistic note was purportedly mailed and that it was practically impossible for him to have sent it.

Outside the inquest room today sat one of the most colorful figures in the investigation and one whose testimony is said to be most valuable.

FIRST COURT VISIT

He is Daniel van Valkenberg, 73-year-old Northfield blacksmith, who has been attached to the Mt. Hermon community for 41 years.

Today was the first time in his life that he had ever been in a courtroom.

LORD RIDDELL, EDITOR, DIES

By International News Service

London, Dec. 6—Lord Riddell, noted British editor and publisher, died in his home in Walton Heath today after an illness of several weeks. He was 69.

Lord Riddell, first Baron of Walton Heath, was one of the most powerful of the group of titled British publishers who for decades have moulded public opinion in Great Britain. His chief publishing venture was the News of the World, one of the uniquely-edited Sunday newspapers of London which boasts a circulation in the millions.

Lord Riddell's widespread influence in the British publishing world was attested by his roster of posts. He was chairman of the Newspaper Proprietors' Association; president of the Periodical, Trade Press and Weekly Newspaper Proprietors' Association, former president of the Advertising Association and officer in numerous publishing houses.

He represented the British press at various peace and disarmament conferences, including the Washington parley of 1921, and was the author of numerous books. Unusually versatile, he wrote on medical problems with the same facility with which he dealt with diplomatic and publication questions.

New Medford City Hall Is Planned

Erection of a city hall, something Medford has tried to accomplish for 43 years, erection of a new South wing at Medford high, erection of a municipal garage and development of the Mystic Valley from Craddock bridge to Medford square, to the Boston and Maine Railroad bridge between Everett and Somerville are propects which Mayor John P. Irwin is submitting to the federal authorities under the new PWA program.

The estimated cost of the building construction program is approximately $1,500,000 without the Mystic Valley project.

Girl Slain, Body Stuffed in Culvert

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 5 (INS)—Criminally attacked and murdered, the body of 12-year-old Leone Love today was found stuffed in a culvert on a road just outside the city limits.

State police found a large stone which they thought was the murder weapon near a pool of blood. There were footprints of one man around the scene.

A man who police said had been molesting small girls in the vicinity was sought.

Arrest of Mystery Aid of Nelson Is Near

By International News Service

Washington, Dec. 5—Revelation of the arrest by federal agents of a "new public enemy" was momentarily expected here today.

Surpasing in importance even the spectacular Alvin Karpis, who has been regarded as succeeding "Baby Face Nelson in the title of the "most wanted fugitive, a new mystery man has appeared on the scene, it became known here.

This man, whose identity has been carefully guarded, is the one who helped "Baby Face" Nelson in his gun battle with Federal Agents Cowley and Hollis last week at Barrington, Ill.

It is definitely known that the "mystery man" is not John Hamilton, last remaining Dallinger gangster.

Neither Karpis nor Hamilton was in the Barrington fight with Nelson.

FINISHED OFF HOLLIS

The new mystery man will be charged with the murder of Agents Cowley and Hollis.

It is known that this certain gangster put a bullet into Hollis' head as the justice agent lay on the ground with another bullet in his body.

After the battle, this man, with Helen Gillis, widow of "Baby Face," helped Nelson into the government agents' car for their getaway.

Hollis was lying on the ground near the car when Mrs. Gillis and the unidentified criminal were starting away and the latter leaned out and fired another shot into Hollis' head.

It was believed here today that the federal agents in Chicago have him in custody now, and are questioning him for information about other-mobsters.

CUMMINGS SILENT

Attorney General Cummings would answer no questions concerning this man, Karpis or Hamilton.

Further credence was placed in the report about this particular man when it was recalled that last Thursday, the day on which Mrs. Gillis was admittedly arrested, the Department of Justice was asked to confirm reports that she and an unidentified man were arrested in Chicago, but vehemently denied the truth of such reports.

Added significance was attached to the reports by a statement Cummings made last night.

He said that Mrs. Gillis had aided "a fugitive" to escape across a state line.

Widow Grilled in Hunt for Killer Pals

By International News Service

Chicago, Dec. 5—Working under a cloak of strict secrecy, the federal government today moved against the surviving members of the John Dillinger gang.

Efforts to locate John Hamilton, reported to be seriously wounded, and Alvin Karpis, wanted in connection with the kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, were relentlessly pursued with the questioning of Mrs. Helen Gillis, widow of the slain George ("Baby Face") Nelson.

Mrs. Gillis was taken into custody on Thanksgiving Day, several hours after Nelson had succumbed to wounds suffered in a gun battle with federal agents in Barrington, Ill., Tuesday of last week.

Karpis is believed to have taken part in the fight which cost the lives of Federal Agents Samuel P. Cowley and Herman E. Hollis.

Department of Justice officials here refused to permit interviews with Mrs. Gillis and would neither affirm nor deny conflicting reports concerning the determined hunt for remnants of the Dillinger mob.

U. S. May Try Nelson's Wife as Murder Aid

Washington, Dec. 5—Mrs. Helen Gillis, widow of the slain George "Baby Face" Nelson, may be prosecuted for complicity of murder, Attorney-General Cummings disclosed here.

He confirmed revelations by the Chicago American that Mrs. Gillis had been "discovered and apprehended by federal agents in Chicago on the evening of November 29," but refused to make public any other information concerning her capture or present whereabouts.

Cummings said the Department of Justice has positive information Mrs. Gillis was the woman who accompanied her husband and another gangster in the gun battle November 27, which resulted in the deaths of two federal agents and Nelson.

The murder charge under consideration is based on this information. Other charges which may be made against Mrs. Gillis, Cummings said, are aiding and abetting in the escape of a fugitive across state lines and stealing the government car in which she and her missing accomplice made their getaway after the shooting.

BRIDE OF SPANISH HEIR RETORTS

New York, Dec. 5—Rumors that a quarrel over red dresses, which she liked and her husband didn't, would bring a parting between the Countess Covadonga and the heir of former King Alfonso of Spain, brought an emphatic denial when the beautiful countess landed here from the liner Berengaria.

Reports have been rife in Europe that the former Prince of the Asturias, who renounced his rights of succession to the throne of Spain in order to marry the bourgeois daughter of a rich Cuban trader, would seek a divorce.

Squelching the story that she would leave her prince for a red dress, the countess stamped her foot as she said:

"Red dresses?—I hate them.

"It's all a terrible misunderstanding. We've had no quarrel. There is going to be no divorce."

"She Didn't"

Over the protests of her sister, Mrs. John Arguelles, who arrived with her, she discussed other reported tiffs. She explained:

"Some one spread the story that I went to a dance and my husband told me if I went, I needn't come back. That is ridiculous. I don't like to dance.

"Then there was the report that I walked out of our hotel in Paris and left my husband.

"That is not true. When my mother came to visit me from Cuba, she and I went off on a little trip for a few days. But when she left, I at once went back to our Paris home."

The countess declined to discuss the statement that her husband plans to visit her family in Cuba. She said she intended to return to Paris in two months.

Countess Covadonga . . . didn't quarrel with her husband, former Prince of Asturias, over a red dress, she says.

Gladys George . . . What would "a plain mug like me" be doing with her? says Leonard Penn.

INGENUES

In Actor's Tavern Cost License

Because women frequented his tavern while he was absent, the license to sell liquor in his establishment on Commercial street was taken away from Silvestre Fragela, for one week by the licensing board.

Fragela is an actor. While he was working in stock companies, he left his tavern in the charge of other people, who permitted women to patronize it, the charge said.

Chef Poisoned

Frank Ranzo, 23, of Cortland street, Everett, employed as a chef in a Back Bay hotel, who was taken to City Hospital as the result of poisoning, will probably recover, hospital attendants said.

'CAT DOCTOR' OF GLADYS TALKS

New York, Dec. 5—Stepping shyly into the spotlight, Leonard Penn of the cast of "Personal Appearance" revealed himself here as co-respondent in the divorce suit against Gladys George, leading woman in the same show.

They were surprised—or at least astonished—last Sunday morning in the actress' apartment by a party of witnesses representing Edward Fowler, husband of Miss George. Fowler is a Springfield, Mass., pepper manufacturer.

This intrusion was not according to the script of the divorce charges, according to actor and actress. Penn was there, Miss George said, ony to help adjust the bandages of her Persian kitten, Monkie, who was convalescing after an operation.

And this, explained Penn, was exactly what he was doing. With professional modesty, he deprecated the importance given his part in the performance.

"What would Miss George be doing with a mugg like me? I have a room two doors away and she was worried about the cat. She called me. Dressed? Of course I was dressed—in this brown suit. And so was Miss George.

"Gosh, I'm not married or anything—but I'll take a terrible ribbing and do a lot of explaining after this."

Miss George, who is somewhat older than her 28-year-old husband, commented:

"I have no objection to divorce. Our marriage was not a hit. But after working so long to get to first base on Broadway, I don't intend to be branded with such charges. Of course, I'll fight. Heavens, if I wanted to be—shall we say facetious?—I wouldn't be dumb enough to go about it that way."

LILA HIDES IDENTITY AS FILM STAR IN WEDDING

FILM STAR LILA LEE

LILA WEDS

MISS LEE HIDES IDENTITY IN N. Y.

By Associated Press

Harrison, N. Y., Dec 4—Lila Kirkwood, describing herself as an actress, 29, of 111 East Sixth street, Hollywood, and John R. Pine, son of A. G. Pine, Chicago manufacturer and father of Virginia Pine of the movies, were married here early today.

The bride said it was her first marriage and clerks did not know that she was Lila Lee, motion picture actress who was previously married to James Kirkwood, actor. Pine said he was also 29, gave Hollywood as his home, said he was retired and that was his first marriage.

WIFE LEAPS

A flying leap from the roof of her apartment to the roof of the adjoining house four long feet away, was taken by Mrs. Walter Ferreria, of 332 Cambridge street, Cambridge, to avoid her estranged husband.

Ferreria, who lives at Winter street, East Cambridge, was arrested for disturbing the peace. Authorities said that Mrs. Ferreria obtained a court order a short time ago to prevent Ferreria from annoying her.

Among Boston's BEST DRESSED WOMEN

(NO. 8)—Mrs. Joseph R. McCoole

LINES MOST IMPORTANT IN ANY GOWN, HER VIEW

Own Designer

EFFECTS SIMPLE TAILORED SUITS AND DRESSES

By MARGARET D. O'CONNELL

A woman who designs nearly all her own clothes is the eighth to be named by the committee selecting 10 among Greater Boston's best-dressed . . .

Mrs. Joseph R. McCoole of 126 Mt. Vernon street, Dedham.

(I won't even draw attention to the fact that this makes seven married women so far selected by Mrs. Leland Powers, John Lavelle and John Whorf, the judges.)

Mrs. McCoole is refreshingly individual in her style. Long recognized as one of the smartest of the Boston set, she has always affected simple, tailored clothes.

Even her headdress—hair drawn severely back into a loose knot at the nape of her neck, to show her high forehead and finely chiseled features to advantage—is one that very few women would attempt because it is so radically different.

Choker of Pearls

When I interviewed her she wore an afternoon gown of black velvet in severe design, depending for added chic upon a choker of pearls. She told me:

"I design practically everything that I wear, and I have my clothes made according to my own taste.

"The most important thing in any gown is the line. A woman must study her figure carefully and try out many types of clothes, discarding all but those that bring out the best points of her figure. Having made her selection of line, she must stick to it no matter if she is tempted by more frilly modes and current fashions.

"As to colors, I am very fond of black and white and green. I never dress in any other shades. In the summer my whole wardrobe is white, relieved only by a touch of color in my accessories. That color is nearly always green.

"In the evening I prefer utter simplicity of line, the gown depending on richness of material and draping for effect, rather than upon intricate shirring and lavish trimming.

"I wear very little jewelry. In fact I don't like jewelry. Perhaps a pin or a choker of pearls; that is all.

"There is nothing from which I get more enjoyment, besides walking, than putting on a heavy tweed coat and getting in my car and driving miles into the country. There is something so restful and beautiful about the countryside in the crisp autumn."

It is interesting to note that Mrs. McCoole is the second Dedham woman named by the committee. The others selected were:

Mrs. Robert Farrington, of Newton.

Miss Kathleen Moran, of Marlborough street.

Mrs. Gardner W. Bullard, of Berkeley street.

Mrs. Matthew J. Whitall, of Otis place.

Mrs. Willard Emery, of Mt. Vernon street.

Mrs. Charles A. Shea, of Dedham.

Mrs. Clark Staples, of Chestnut Hill.

(In tomorrow's article Mrs. O'Connell will reveal the identity of the ninth woman to be chosen and will tell you all about her.)

ALL AGES, BOTH SEXES AID CHRISTMAS BASKET FUND

All ages and both sexes among the Goodfellows of Greater Boston are rallying to the aid of the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund and of the needy and luckless, that happiness may come to them at Christmas time.

Today the Christmas Basket Fund editor received a letter from a group of Medford girls, a letter reflecting the spirit of charity and helpfulness that is needed to overcome disappointment in what should be the happiest season of the year.

Here is the letter:

"We read about your Christmas Basket Fund in the Boston Evening American and want to do something for the needy.

WANT TO HELP

"We are a group of girls between the ages of 13 and 15, who a short while ago formed a club which we named the Sunshine and Charity Club. There are only about seven or eight of us in the club, but when we read about your fund for the needy we at once had a desire to do something for the poor and unfortunate people and help give them a better Christmas.

"We are writing in to ask you if you will please give us the name and address of a poor family in which there are only three or four children, for we are sure we could provide for them nicely if they are not above the ages of eight or nine.

"Don't forget, for we do so want to be helpful and live up to our name. If you can, we would like to have a family near Medford. Our sponsor, Mrs. Nelson, and also our parents approve of our plans."

Well—the Sunshine and Charity Club, of which Lillian Barney of 48 Carolina street, Medford, is secretary, and Mrs. Gladys T. Nelson the sponsor, certainly will have a needy family turned over to them, and the editor would be glad to hear from other organizations.

OTHERS MOBILIZE

Meanwhile other Goodfellows are mobilizing in the Christmas battle against disappointment and sadness—although there cannot be too many.

Entertainments have been arranged at which, while you are having your fun, you can be happier in the thought that you are also helping those who otherwise would have little or no happiness during the holiday season—and children who might not even have enough to eat.

There is a big show scheduled for next Sunday night at the Mayfair in Broadway. Here the foremost stage, screen and radio stars who are in town will entertain, through courtesy of Benny Ginsburg, and here will be an opportunity to see your favorite entertainers close up.

Sammy Liner and his snappy dance band will hold forth at the Mayfair; Joe Rines of the Gay Manner and The Cascades will be master of ceremonies and will bring over a Cascades act.

As part of the huge floor show, Meta Carlyle, beautiful Mayfair star; Peaches Browning, who will be appearing at the Gayety Theater next week; Buddy Clark, radio headliner, and a host of stage and other stars, will take part.

Tickets are only $2.50 for the big show and are on sale today at the Mayfair, in Broadway, just off Stuart street. And after the show there will be dancing from midnight until 2 a. m.

That is one big party in aid of the Christmas Basket Fund. Another will be a big vaudeville show in the Municipal Building, South Boston, on the night of December 18, arranged by the Alfred E. Smith Club of South Boston.

QUINN ON COMMITTEE

Martin J. Quinn, president of the club, and Representative Robert V. Lee head the committee arranging this show, and many fine acts of vaudeville as well as individual stage and radio stars, including Ranny Weeks, will be in the Alfred E. Smith Club show.

Also, at the original Beano game going on daily at the New Normandie Ballroom, 547 Washington street, part of the poceeds are being donated to the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund.

So if you have a club, a society or a fraternity, why don't you, too, run a show or a dance or an entertainment for the benefit of the Christmas Basket Fund? You'll have a lot of fun, the patrons will have entertainment—and the needy will benefit at Christmas time.

Even if only $5 net goes into the Christmas Basket Fund, it will mean that much happiness at Christmas time to bring some family out of despair. If $100 is received, it means just so many more families.

Go to it—you Goodfellows in bridge clubs, in social clubs, in neighborhood organizations and in other associations!

At the table are Mrs. Arthur Moran, Mrs. Edgar Arcand, Mrs. John Walsh and Mrs. Thomas Cavanaugh (chairman). Once a year, at this season, the charitable women of the club devote all proceeds of their card party to the good work of the Christmas Basket editor.

HAUPTMANN TO TELL OF RANSOM

By International News Service

Flemington, N. J., Dec. 5—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, accused slayer of the Lindbergh baby, was to tell in detail again today how more than $14,000 of the Lindbergh ransom money came into his possession.

He will tell his story to members of his defense corps, who are attempting to persuade Frederick Pope, noted criminal lawyer of Somerville, N. J., to join his battery of defenders.

Pope declared he would not be associated with Hauptmann's defense unless three conditions are met.

"I must be assured Hauptmann has a legitimate defense, that the legal fees will not be paid out of Lindbergh ransom money, and of a reasonable compensation for my services," Pope declared.

Cuba Bans Liquor Smuggling to U. S.

Havana, Dec. 5 (US)—The official gazette publishes a decree by President Mendieta prohibiting the shipping of any Cuban alcohol for any port which is known as a base for smuggling liquor to the United States.

Mendieta's move is interpreted as a friendly gesture prior to asking for a material reduction in the United States tariff on Cuban alcohol.

$50 OCEAN TRIP STILL PLANNED

By Associated Press

London, Dec. 5 — Plans for the formation of a company to run £10 (approximately $50) passenger trips to the United tSates with Red Star liners have not been abandoned, despite indications of government opposition.

The matter was raised in the House of Commons last night when Colonel J. Sandeman Allen said the project was British, Great Britain would control the service and the promoters would not build new tonnage without consulting the government.

Allen said the proposal to take passengers at $50 fares from Liverpool to New York did not include meals.

"Many poor people in this country, particularly in the North of England, have relatives in the United States and would be glad to avail themselves of the service," he asserted.

BOY OF 11 ASKS CHRISTMAS AID FOR SICK FATHER

Here are more appeals received by the Christmas Basket Fund Editor. Every one of these cases has been investigated and found worthy of the help of Goodfellows who wish to see that no one lacks Christmas joy.

CASE 14

I am writing to tell you we had no turkey or goose Thanksgiving, as our Daddy has not worked for a long time. He is sick all the time and goes to the City Hospital for treatment.

He has no clothes to wear, just an old work suit and coat. If any one had a suit of clothes to give my sick father or a warm overcoat we would gladly do without a Christmas basket, because we may not have him with us next Christmas.

He is a tall man, almost six feet, and was a good worker when he was well.

We got a notice to move because we owe two months rent. My mother is not well and three of my little sisters are just recovering from whooping cough. It makes my mother cry, so much trouble, and so long before we can help her. I am only 11, my sister Nellie is 10, Jack is seven, Marie is five, Loretta and Joan are three.

This family lives in Roxbury. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for case No. 14.

CASE 15

I hope you will not forget to send us a Christmas basket, as we need it. My mother is not working, and my father left us nine years ago. My mother is trying to do the best she can for us. I have a sister 15 years old that has been sick in the hospital for the last four years. She is at home now, but not strong enough to work.

She was paralyzed and had diphtheria, and please, we would love to get a basket, as it would please our mother so much. You sent us a lovely basket last year and we thank you so much for being so good to us.

We hope you don't forget us, Santa.

Our father never sent us any money since he went away. And it is so hard for my mother to give us the food and clothes we need. We know there are lots of poor children that need food and clothes as we do, so do the best you can. We will be waiting.

This girl lives in the South End. Anyone wishing to help her may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for case No. 15.

CASE 16

This is the first time I have ever asked for any help from anyone, so I am writing you for some help for Christmas.

I would appreciate it if you could send me a basket, I am not asking for anything else as my two children asked me for a turkey for Thanksgiving but I had no money for one. I told them I would try and have one for Christmas. This is the first time I have appealed for any help in all my life and 12 years of married life as I never needed any help. I hope it will be the last time I need ask for aid. I had to borrow the two cents for the stamp to send this letter.

This mother lives in the South End. Anyone who wishes to help her may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 16.

CASE 17

I have been sick with heart trouble for years, I am not on the welfare. I am the father of 12 children, two of them now dead. There are now 11 in the family including myself.

My oldest boy brings in about $9 a week and the next boy brings in about the same, he is a laborer on the ERA. We pay our rent and have barely enough left to buy food. We have to go without clothes and lots of things.

If you can send us anything for Christmas or any clothes, stockings, shoes, mittens, we will be glad to eat bread and butter and cocoa for our Christmas dinner in order that the little ones be made happy.

This family lives in Cambridge. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Christmas Basket editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 17.

RACE BOARD HEARING ENDS IN ELY-CROOKER TIFF

sive Eastern Horse Club, was being questioned by Attorney Crooker on an alleged statement about the caliber of the appointees, when the Governor interrupted.

The society man had just replied to Crooker that he could not remember the statement in question, when the Governor said:

"How long is questioning along that line going to continue?"

Crooker continued with his questioning, until the Governor again interrupted with:

"The council has heard enough along that line. The council rules that they have heard enough."

COAKLEY PROTESTS

Councillor Daniel H. Coakley leaped to his feet and announced:

"As far as I'm concerned, I don't think we've had enough. I think the public is entitled to know everything about it."

Governor Ely:

"I refuse to change the ruling. The Council has heard enough."

Lieutenant-Governor Bacon then arose and announced that it seemed to him that anything Tuckerman had to say was material to the hearing.

Governor Ely:

"Then we disagree. I still rule it out."

Crooker entered the debate again with an announcement that ended the hearing. He shouted:

CALLS HEARING A FARCE

"I have raised the point in this proceeding that I thought I would. I'm thoroughly satisfied that Your Excellency has no use for me and my case.

"You have obstructed the case. If this be your attitude, this hearing is a farce—and I'm done. The responsibility is yours and you can take the nominations and do with them as you please."

The Govenror arose and bowed to Crooker, saying:

"Good-bye, Mr. Crooker."

He then announced that the hearing had ended and would not be resumed. Later he said the council could hold another hearing if it wished. He said he intended to press for confirmation right away.

Crooker stalked from the hearing room into a corridor. He became embroiled in a verbal argument with a spectactor until a State House guard broke it up.

Shouting above the din to a group of newspapermen, he called out:

"The governor has ridden herd over me for the last time. He has protected every witness that has appeared. That hearing was an absolute farce."

Governor Ely later told reporters he thought Crooker had only been looking for an opportunity to quit.

Governor Ely left the hearing room and went directly to his private office.

Republican members of the council met with Lieutenant-Governor Bacon for a short time after the close of the hearing. To a Boston Evening American reporter they later gave varied views on the hearing.

COUNCILLORS DIFFER

Lieutenant-Governor Bacon said:

"I think the questioning was perfectly proper."

Councillor Edmund Cote:

"I think the Governor was right in limiting the questioning."

Councillor Winfield A. Schuster:

"I would rather not make any statement."

Councillor Daniel H. Coakley:

"I have nothing to add to what I said publicly at the hearing. The examination was proper and it should have gone on."

Councillor Joseph Grossman:

"It was rather unfortunate but I don't think the result would have made any difference. I don't think the questioning would have brought out any more as to the qualifications of the commissioners.

Eugene A. F. Burnett:

"The ending was very unfortunate. It was too bad."

The questioning that led to the sudden ending had to do with whether or not Tuckerman has said the commission "smelled."

Tuckerman was the first witness called by Attorney Crooker. He walked with a limp, due to a recent injury in a fall from a horse. He was placed under oath.

Q (by Crooker)—State your general experience with horse racing.

Governor Ely interrupted:

"Can't we take that for granted? The council can assume that he is an experienced horse man and that he knows as much, if not more, about racing than any other man in the state."

Q—Are you the father of a pari-mutuel bill? A—One of them.

Q—You have been identified with pari-mutuel betting from the outset? A—Yes.

Q.—You were in touch with the progress of the legislation in 1934? A—Yes.

Q—After the signing of the act and prior to the naming of the appointees, what conversation, if any, did you have with any member of this council? A—I don't know that I had any conversation with any of the members.

Q—Did you and your group make any recommendations in the matter of appointments to the racing commission? A—The Eastern Horse Club made no recommendations.

Q—Did you, as an individual, make any recommendations? A—No.

Q—Did any of your group make any, so far as you know? A—I don't think they did.

TRICKS OF RACING

Q.—What type of commission, in your opinion, is desirable? A.—The more experience they could have the better off they should be.

Q.—Men who knew the tricks of racing would be desirable for the racing commission? A.—I think so.

Q.—Are there available for appointment men of experience and men without improper entangling alliances who would make good commissioners?

Governor Ely: Isn't the issue here before us on the competency of this commission?

Crooker: You asked me yesterday if there were any better men.

Gov. Ely: I don't recall that.

VOTES FOR ANSWER

When Crooker insisted on an answer from Tuckerman the council was polled on whether they wanted an answer and they voted for the reply.

A—(By Tuckerman): I think there are very few who have had experience.

Q—Are there sufficient number of men available to make up this commission? A—Yes.

Q—Did you ever mention any name of experienced men to the Governor? A—In one conversation I had with the Governor I think I did mention one name.

Q—Did His Excellency ask you for any suggestions? A—I don't think so.

Crooker then started to frame a question "There are grave abuses on the part of crooked owners, handlers and riders ——"

Governor Ely interrupted:

"Can't we assume that? I don't think there is anyone in this room who will doubt that there are abuses. Proceed."

Q—How could an inexperienced commissioner detect abuses? A—If they were the right kind of men they could.

Q—You mean after they learn? A—They could anyway.

Q—Did you in conversation with the Governor suggest any of the three appointees? A—No.

SUGGESTED A. J. WILSON

Q—Did you suggest anyone? A—I suggested the name of Allan J. Wilson as being representative of the trotting horse people of Massachusetts and an excellent man for the post because of his experience.

Q—Were you asked to make this suggestion? A—No.

Q—Did you suggest anyone else? A—No.

Q—When did you first know of the appointment? —When I read it in the paper.

Q.—What was your reaction? A.—I didn't think they were so hot.

Q.—Did you discuss the appointment of any of the Eastern Horse Club group? A.—I might have talked with a few persons individually.

Q.—What do you mean by not so hot? A.—I mean this, I had a high regard for General Cole. The other two gentlemen I never heard of. That may be in their favor, yet I have had a wide acquaintance in this state.

DIDN'T EXPRESS THOUGHTS

Q.—Do you know anyone who suggested the names of these three men to the Governor? A.—No.

Q.—Did you express any opposition to their confirmation? A.—I did not.

From that point the line of questioning ran to the queries of whether or not Tuckerman had said the appointment of the commission "stunk" and to the debate that ended the hearing.

Interviewed by newspapermen after the sudden ending of the hearing, Governor Ely said that the executive council might hold another hearing "for all I care."

Asked whether he would preside at such a hearing, he said:

"I'll face that question when it arises."

Reverting to today's turbulent session, he said:

"This fellow Crooker evidently was looking for a chance to walk out of the hearing. I think I was very patient with him, all things considered.

"I felt that we had gone into all the details of his (Crooker's) visit with Tuckerman. Tuckerman answered all necessary questions. Crooker just figured that the time had come to pick up his papers and walk out."

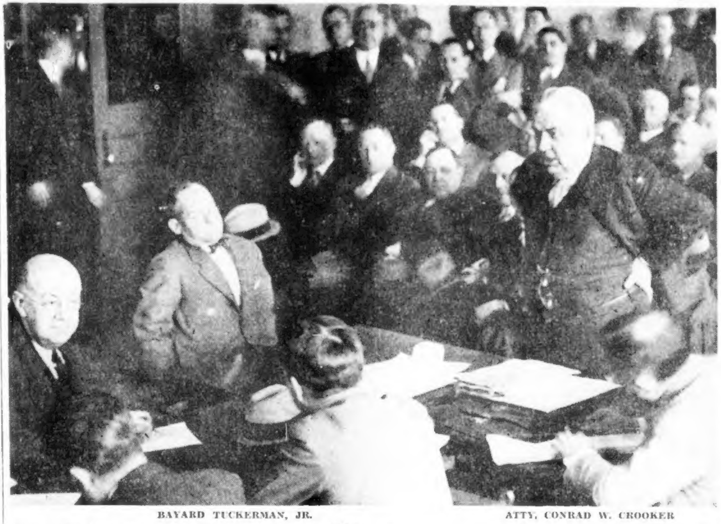
'A Farce; I'm Done,' Crooker Shouts, Quitting Hearing



BAYARD TUCKERMAN, JR. ATTY. CONRAD W. CROOKER

Here is the stormy scene which rang the curtain down today on the Massachusetts racing commission appointment hearings at the State House. On his feet, to the right, is Atty. Conrad W. Crooker, chief proponent of the "investigation," engaged in a heated verbal clash with Governor Ely. "I've reached the point I expected to reach," storms Crooker. "This hearing is a farce; I'm done!" Seated at the table, to the left, is Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., wealthy North Shore sportsman, cross-examination of whom, by Crooker, brought about the flare-up which adjourned the assembly. Tuckerman, called as a witness, had denied that he told Crooker that the Ely racing commission appointments "smelled." Governor Ely ruled against continuance of "that line of inquiry."

JOB OUSTER MAY COST $40,000

Twenty-three years after he was dismissed from the Arlington police force, Edward T. Ryan's petition for a review of the discharge may e granted in East Cambridge district court.

Should this action lead to the 62-year-old man's eventual reinstatement, it would mean that the town would have to pay him approximately $40,000 in back salary and make him eligible for a pension.

John L. Murphy, Arlington town counsel, today appeared before Judge Arthur P. Stone and argued the petition for review should be dismissed because Ryan had allowed 23 years to elapse since he filed it in 1911.

Counseu for Ryan, however, pointed out that the town could have forced the issue as well as Ryna. Judge Stone took the matter under advisement.

Ryan was dismissed in 1911 on charges of insubordination, after he had been a member of the police force since 1905.

3 Men Grilled in Death Case Freed

Originally questioned in connection with the death of Andrew Merrilla, a Duxbury wood chopper, in Abington road, Hingham, three men today were arraigned before Judge Daniel Shea in Hingham court and drunkenness charges against them were filed.

They were Joseph Ross of Hanover and Fred Brunctron and Alex Sankowski of North Hanover. The three had been drinking with Merrilla. His death was today attributed to a hit and run driver by Medical Examiner John G. Sweeney. It was at first believed he might have been killed with an axe.

Hub Police Asked to Find N. Y. Auto

A teletype message from the Connecticut state police was received today at Boston police headquarters, asking the Boston police to be on lookout for a 1927 phaeton, N. Y. registration 3-c-1265, blue body with a red stripe, Boston-bound.

License was issued to a ficitious Brooklyn, N. Y., resident. Connecticut police say the car was used in a bank robbery there and request arrest of occupants.

$16,000,000 Lent to Home Owners

More than $16,000,000 in loans have been made in the past six months by co-operative banks in Massachusetts to nearly 6000 home owners, according to a letter received by James A. Moffett, federal housing commissioner, from Lawrence H. Marson, president of the Massachusetts Co-operative Bank League.

Firestone Visits Fall River Mill

Fall River, Dec. 5—After saying labor had taken too much control of the industrial situation for its own best interests, Harvey S. Firestone, Sr., on a visit of inspection here, said that he would continue the Firestone mills in this city and New Bedford as long as he was assured of the loyalty of his workers.

Tip on Babes in Wood Case Wins $25 Award

Police of the nation turned to Boston for a time in their attempts to identify the victims of the "babes-in-the-woods" tragedy at Carlysle, Pa.

A New York to Harrisburg, Pa., bus driver had identified the victims as passengers on his bus from New York. They carried tickets, he said, which showed that they came from Boston. Then the police of Pennsylvania turned to Boston for a possible solution of the tragedy.

Boston police were requested to check bus stations to learn if any of the drivers remembered the children and the woman as passengers. Throughout the day, Captain Stephen J. Flaherty and his detectives searched for the bus driver.

Earl Sylvester, a South Boston man and a bus driver, in good faith, declared he believed the victims were passengers on his bus from Boston to New York. He mentioned it to fellow employes and several friends.

One of these, whose identity is withheld at his request, notified the Boston Evening American News Tip Editor. The tip enabled this newspaper to score a beat on the story and the tipster is awarded the $25 first prize in the news tip contest this week.

TEN $1 AWARDS

Mary McManus of Weston road, Waltham, wins the second prize of $10 for her tip on the accident which resulted in the death of Edward Coulon, son of the Boston hotel manager.

Third prize, $5, is awarded to a Brookline man who asks that his identity be withheld. He gave the News Tip Editor the first information on an accident on the Worcester turnpike in which one woman died and six other persons were injured.

The 10 $1 prizes are awarded to the following:

Al McClellan, 190 Salem street, Swampscott, for tip and pictures on a Lynn accident.

Mary Curran, 319 Huntington avenue, Back Bay, for tip on a raid.

Paul Lawrence, 3 Cottage court, Dorchester, for a tip on a welfare story.

Herbert T. Farley, 158 Mystic Valley Parkway, Arlington, for tip on an accident.

Catherin Doyle, 8 Harrison avenue, Boston, tip on runaway horse.

J. C. Bentley, 1375 Hancock street, Quincy, for tip on Quincy municipal Christmas tree toppling in gale.

Lawrence Porter, 7 Taft street, Revere, for tip on body being found.

Louise H. Bradway, 807 South street, Roslindale, for tip on a two-alarm fire.

A Wellesley man, for tip on police enforcing Sunday labor law.

CAPTAIN HELD IN $71,276 THEFT

By Associated Press

Manchester, N. H., Dec. 5—Captain Freeman Hatfield, solemn, erect and silent, today awaited extradition to Canada to face trial in Ottawa, January 7, on charges of defrauding the Canadian government of $71,276.72.

Captain Hatfield has been living on a small farm in nearby Candia since retiring from the sea. He was arrested on the farm yesterday by a Royal Canadian mounted policeman, who had spent two years trailing him.

He accompanied the officers to Manchester, was remanded to jail and refused bail after the R. C. M. P. explained to a U. S. commissioner that Captain Hatfield was a fugitive from charges that he conspired to defraud the Canadian government by falsely obtaining reparations for a sailing vessel supposedly torpedoed by a German submarine during the war.

The vessel was the three-masted Gypsum Queen of which Captain Hatfield was the owner. She sank off the Irish coast in July 1915, and 15 years later the skipper applied to the Canadian government for reparations.

Captain Hatfield was awarded $71,276.72. Subsequently, the government claimed that the vessel had not been torpedoed, but had sunk in a storm.

20 Called in Home Loan Bribe Probe

More than 20 Norfolk residents including minor politicians, were to have been called before the Norfolk County grand jury today on charges of soliciting fees for obtaining "quick" action for applicants for funds from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing was to present the evidence. He said most of those called were residents of Quincy or Milton.

BOSTON TO FETE JAPAN ENVOY

Japan's ambassador to the United States, His Excellency Hirosi Saito, will be received tonight by the Japan Society of Boston in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

Because of his recent semi-official statement that Japan would denounce the present three-power naval engagement, regardless of the outcome of the London conversations, his speech is expected with keen interest, even though he is scheduled to talk on "Boston and Japan."

The envoy, who will arrive in Milton early this evening by motor, will be the guest there of W. Cameron Forbes, former American ambassador to Tokio.

A diner will be given in his honor by Mrs. James S. Russell, of Milton, who acted as hostess for Forbes in the American embassy.

Tomorrow the Japanese envoy will visit Harvard, Technology and the Museum of Fine Arts. He will be entertained at a luncheon by Richard Danielson, of Dartmouth street and Groton, honorary Japanese consul here, and will visit friends in Cambridge.

BRITISH OFFER TROOPS FOR SAAR VOTE

By Associated Press

Geneva, Dec 5—Capt. Anthony Eden, British delegate to the League of Nations, announced today that if France will agree not to send troops into the Saar basin territory and if Germany is willing, great britain will police the Saar with British troops during the Saar plebiscite next month.

The British offer caused a sensation in the League of Nations.

Captain Eden's proposal was made directly to the League Council in full meeting. The Council already had heard a report on the outlook for the plebiscite.

The report specified that if the Saarites voted in favor of continuing their present league rule, rather than be annexed to France or Germany, the league would become the "titular sovereign" of the Saar.

But the announcement of the British envoy was not the only sensation of the day.

Pierre Laval, France's foreign minister, told the council that France absolutely will not participate in any international force which may be sent into the Saar.

Previously France had warned the world that she was ready to enter the Saar with troops for the maintenance of order, should the league governing committee call for thme.

M. I. T. POISON DEATH BARED

Jesse Russell White, Jr., 20, sophomore at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was found dead in the third floor living room of his fraternity house on Beacon street, Back Bay, Sunday morning, it was learned today.

Medical Examiner George B. McGrath said that death was due to a poison, self administered.

White, the son of an Albany, N. Y., architect, was an excellent student, and was in good health, so far as could be learned. No reason for his act could be found.

Although the body was found Sunday morning by his room-mate, Robert Reichart, a junior at Tech, no report was made until more than 24 hours later, when it was reported directly to the medical examiner.

He was graduated with top honors from Albany Academy in 1932, and held several offices and honors in his class.

Dr. Magrath refused to tell what poison caused the death, saying:

"I am not going into details of how it was done. With the depression still with us, this is no time to exploit suicide."

However, the doctor admitted that the boy had left a note to his father. In it he said that he was discouraged and intended to "end it all."

Robert L. Johnson Relief Director

225 Quit Work in N. H. Mill Protest

Penacook, N. H., Dec. 5 (AP)—About 225 workers in the Harris woolen mills, here, left their looms today in protest against alleged stretch out in the carding department, the operatives said. They claimed five of fourteen in the department were discharged and those remaining ordered to take up all of the work.

Is Mercy Killing Right?

Boston Differs On Taking Life

Has a human being ever the right to take anothers' life, even when prompted by the most altruistic of motives?

Again that question has come up in the world's news, as a gray-haired wisp of a woman, 62 and cultured, lies ill and near death in her prison-cell in England, awaiting . . . the hangman's noose or a pardon.

Facing an operation which might prove fatal, Mrs. May Brownhill, "put to sleep forever" her imbecile son for whom she had cared tirelessly and lovingly throughout his 30 helpless years, rather than leave him to the mercy of strangers.

A jury found her guilty, recommending mercy. The judge who passed the death sentence, because he believed it mandatory, said:

"Rarely has human love and devotion been shown in a higher light than by this woman."

In Boston today—strolling on the Common, up Tremont street and down Beacon street—men and women commented, favorably and adversely, on the action of this latest "mercy-killer."

MRS. VIRGINIA BENSON, 346 Commonwealth avenue, buyer, said:

"I have the greatest sympathy and admiration for Mrs. Brownhill. She ended her son's life because of the bigness of her love. She loved him so unselfishly that she risked her life to spare him the world's cruelties.

MRS. VIRGINIA BENSON

"What she has done should renew our faith in human nature. I sincerely hope that English law, which can be so rigidly right regardless of the human equation, will see fit to pardon this really noble mother."

MISS MARY HOLLAND, 116 N street, South Boston, saleswoman, said:

"No one has the right to take another's life. Who are we to decide that a soul is ready to face eternity? I have the deepest pity for this unfortunate, aging Englishwoman, who loved her hopelessly incapacitated son so tenderly that she dared not let him live in a world bereft of her kindly ministrations. However, I insist that she had no right to end his life.

MARY HOLLAND

"In a world that has become increasingly concerned with material things, there are those who seem to forget that we are all possessed of a spiritual life and that this existence is but a preparation for a future life."

MISS MIRIAM EILENBERGER, 42 St. Paul terrace, Brookline, like Mrs. Benson, believes that Mrs. Brownhill should be lauded rather than condemned for her "act of mercy." She declared:

MISS MIRIAM EILENBERGER

"That poor, unhappy woman, what courage she exhibited to do what was so entirely alien to her gentle nature! She did what she thought was 'for the best' for her imbecile son. Probably, if the judge asked her if she desired to live he might learn that, now, her sole interest gone, life does not hold very much for her."

MRS. C. R. CHURCHILL of the Lenox Hotel, former actress, agrees with George Bernard Shaw that:

"It is time we, who call ourselves civilized, made it legal to send the idiot or the imbecile to a merciful death. Such a law is long overdue.

MRS. C. R. CHURCHILL

"Even the judge who passed the death sentence on Mrs. Brownhill made the statement that he believed the time would come when the laws of Great Britain would permit these unfortunate creatures to be sent to a painless death.

"It is infinitely better than the living death they are compelled to endure."

MISS ALICE DAUWER, 736 6th street, South Boston, youthful business woman, contended that:

"Society will never recognize the right of one human being to take another's life because of physical or mental infirmities.

"Certain primitive peoples used to put to death the unfit of their tribes.

ALICE DAUWER

"Today, most people have some sort of religious belief and are ready to admit that man is more than a member of the animal kingdom."

Dog on Trestle Slows L Trains

On the elevated trestle between Sullivan square and Thompson square in Charlestown today a stray shepherd dog paced a train—delaying it and others behind it for about eight minutes.

The dog fell into the pit at Sullivan square and defied efforts of track men who tried, first, to coax it out, and then to capture it.

It ambled a leisurely pace on the tracks over Main street, sidestepping the third rail and refusing to be hurried. Dog-catchers awaited it at Thompson square.

1 DEAD, 15 HURT IN FILM LOT FIRE

By Associated Press

Burbank, Cal., Dec. 5—Fire swept Warner Brothers-First National studios here, causing one death, injuring 15 persons and doing damage estimated at $300,000 before it was extinguished early today.

Albert Rounder, 65-year-old fire chief of the motion picture studio, died at a first aid station of heart disease, which doctors said was induced by the excitement of the conflagration.

Rudolph Hoop, an actor, and Nick Potskoff, studio workman, were the most seriously injured. Each suffered a broken leg, minor burns and bruises.

Officials of the film plant said the fire swept over about half the 80 acres occupied by the studio.

Loaded Navy Shell Puzzle to Police

A loaded 3.8-inch navy shell, evidently dating back to the World War, turned up at a Lexington filling station and today is a problem to local police authorities.

The shell is believed to be gas filled. It was left at the station by an unknown truck driver, who reported finding. He said he was afraid it might go off.

CALL-BULLETIN JOB CASE IS REOPENED

By Universal Service

Washington, Dec. 5—The national labor relations board has re-opened the San Francisco Call-Bulletin case in which Monday it handed down a lengthy decision ordering reinstatement of Dean S. Jennings, chief rewrite man.

Acting general counsel Blackwell Smith of the National Recovery Administration requested the rehearing. In granting it the board issued this statement:

"At the request of the acting general counsel for the National Recovery Administration the national labor relations board has consented to reopen the San Francisco Call-Bulletin case in order to afford the National Recovery Administration further opportunity to present the circumstances connected with the adoption of the newspaper code, and of rearguing the questions involved in the decision of the case.

DATE TO BE ANNOUNCED

A date for such arguments and presentation will shortly be announced by the national labor relations board."

The Call-Bulletin, a Hearst newspaper, challenged the jurisdiction of the national labor relations board to pass upon the merits of the case, contending it was a matter properly within the province of the newspaper industrial board.

After the decision was rendered Monday, Howard Davis, president of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, declared it was a threat at the freedom of the press.

When announcement of a rehearing was communicated to John Francis Neylan, chief counsel of the Hearst newspapers, at Los Angeles, he said:

"The so-called decision of the national labor relations board bore all the earmarks of a manifesto of a political junta.

DECISION SCORED

"It was designed to oust the newspaper industrial board, composed of equal representation of employers and employes and to seize the overlordship of the press of the United States for three obscure appointed politicians.

"Legally the decision was not only unsound, it represented pettifogging at its worst.

"Morally, it glorifies an assumed betrayal of trust.

"In essence, it was a stupid insult to the President of the United States and his personal representatives who had induced the publishers to sign a code."

PROBERS BARE UTILITY DRIVE

By International News Service

Washington, Dec. 5—Attempting to forestall public ownership, the power and gas utilities engaged in widespread propaganda and political activities among chambers of commerce, banks, churches, state public service commissions and youth organizations, the Federal Trade Commission said today in the third period of its investigation of the so-called "power trust."

In previous reports the commission charged the utilities with conducting propaganda activities through the press and in colleges and schools.

Seeking to enlist the aid of banks, utilities companies placed approximately $1,500,000 in 230 financial institutions without requiring any interest on such deposits, the report continued. A letter by A. F. Hockenbeamer, president of the Pacific Gas and Electric Co., to A. W. Robertson, head of the Philadelphia Co., Pittsburgh, outlines the purpose of such deposits.

Believing the nation's youth should be won over to the cause of the private utility, extensive propaganda activities were carried forward to enlist the good will of the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Boy Scouts and Young Men's Business Associations, according to the commission.

Newspaper Decision Is Scored by Schall

By Universal Service

Minneapolis, Dec. 5 — United States Senator Thomas D. Schall, in criticizing the national labor relations board's decision in the San Francisco Call-Bulletin case, said:

"The sixth attempt of the Roosevelt administration to censor the press of the United States occurred when the national relations board at Washington announced it would take jurisdiction in the San Francisco Call-Bulletin case.

"Article seven of the newspaper code provides that no modification of the code as it affects any publisher shall be binding unless he consents to it. The labor board ruled that this clause was meaningless, that the President might modify the code at any time and in any manner he desired.

"This reminds us of the Democratic platform for which Mr. Roosevelt said he stood '100 per cent' and then repudiated as soon as he was elected to office.

"The question involved in the Call-Bulletin case is not the issue, the consideration is that the President repudiates a code after he signed it. We thought Japan and European defaulters had a corner on this privilege."

Arms Suspect Held

Harold A. Sumpter, 32, who is alleged to be wanted in Philadelphia for a violation of that city's firearms law, faced a police lineup today. Police arrested him in Scollay square.

PLANES SWEEP PACIFIC FOR FLIERS

came into port early today, apparently having given up the search. It had turned from its course yesterday when the plane radioed its fuel was exhausted and it was landing on the water.

Throughout the night 35 naval vessels swept the darkness with search lights and continued cruising for the luckless fliers today.

The theory grew among naval officers that Ulm's plane had landed short of Oahu and to the northeast.

Agreeing with this theory Commander E. W. Tod directed naval searchers to scour this territory thoroughly.

Commander Tod said he doubted if the plane still was afloat.

"When a plane comes down on the water, it comes down hard," he said. "When a land plane hits the water it probably turns turtle. Although radio reports seemed to indicate the plane was upright when it landed yesterday, after it landed there still is danger of its becoming water-logged and sinking."

SEARCH PLANES RETURN

One by one, the planes which started the search yesterday, returned to their bases last night, but 18 submarines, three light mine layers and two coast guard vessels continued the hunt throughout the night.

The Star of Australia was of wood and fabric construction, and was underpowered for the job she was asked to do, according to the men who helped put her in the best possible shape for her long, over-sea dash.

And she was a rush job, put together while the three fliers fidgeted to get away. Loose ends of fabric—a material long since abandoned in this country in favor of light sheet metals—hung off the wings and fuselage.

Just before the takeoff, almost to the very minute when Ulm and his two companions climbed aboard, it was revealed today, mechanics were busy patching and pasting with new fabric and "dope."

Somewhere approximately 500 miles off the coast of Hawaii, as indicated by the map sketched above, Lieutenant Pilot Charles T. P. Ulm and two flying companions had either met their death today—or were still clinging to the half-submerged wreckage of their big land plane, the Star of Australia, in which they had hoped to wing their way from Oakland, California, to Honolulu. Guided only by a series of fast weakening SOS calls from the Ulm party's radio, now long since silenced, surface ships, a fleet of U. S. submarines, and every available flying craft were engaged in an intensive search for the missing trio, forced down yesterday by lack of gasoline. With Lieutenant Ulm are Co.Pilot George Littlejohn and Navigator Jack Skilling. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

3 Chained to Street Poles

By Associated Press

Paintsville, Ky., Dec.—In a scene remoiniscent of Colonial days three men who refused to work out fines imposed for drunkenness were chained to power line poles on Main street here today.

Large crowds gathered to see Town Marshal Jess Allen bind the men with log chains and attach two 25-pound iron balls to each man and lock them with padlocks to separate posts on three corners. Allen said he acted on orders of police Judge R. A. Patrick, who said later that the trio would stay there, except at night, until they agreed to work out their fines.

A relative of one of the trio said he would ask legal advice in the hope of forcing the officials to unchain the victims and put them back in jail.

Socialists, Communists Lose Ground in '34 Vote

Figures indicating that Communism and Socialism are losing ground in Massachusetts feature results of the official canvass of November election returns made by Governor Ely and the council, and announced today.

Edward Stevens, of Boston, Communist party candidate for governor, received 4137 votes. The Communist vote for governor in 1932 was 6118.

Alfred Baker Lewis, of Cambridge, Socialist party candidate for governor, received 12,282 votes. Two years ago he received 24,503.

The Socialist Labor vote showed a slight gain, from 3811 polled in 1932, to 5803 received in the last election by John W. Aiken, of Chelsea, candidate for governor.

The Prohibition party, which had no candidate in Massachusetts two years ago, cast exactly 2990 votes in November for Freeman W. Follett, of Haverhill.

The official canvass showed James M. Curley elected governor over Gaspar G. Bacon, his Republican opponent, by a plurality of 109,050 votes.

Curley is officially credited with a total of 736,463, while Bacon polled 627,413.

Frank A. Goodwin, Equal Tax, polled 94,141.

The Socialist Party candidate for lieutenant-governor, Elizabeth Donovan of North Brookfield, received 20,419 votes as against but 9755 for Morris I. Becker of Boston for lieutenant-governor in 1932.

John W. Haigis of Greenfield, G. O. P. candidate for lieutenant-governor, was defeated by Mayor Joseph L. Hurley of Fall River by a plurality of 72,133. Hurley received 738,626, Haigis, 666,493.

For Secretary of State, Frederic W. Cook, only Republican on the state ticket to escape the Democratic landslide, got a total of 691,099 votes as against 681,124 for Joseph Santosuosso of Boston. Cook's plurality is 9975.

A state-wide recount of this vote has been petitioned for by Santosuosso and will be ordered within a few days.

Other results of the official canvass show:

STATE TREASURER

Charles F. Hurley (D.)....771,948
Oscar U. Dionne (R.)....593,465
Hurley's plurality, 178,483

STATE AUDITOR

Thomas H. Buckley (D.)..752,264

Casassa Trails O'Brien; Quincy Elects Ross

REVERE—Revere's primary provides a surprise as City Treasurer James M. O'Brien tops the mayoralty ticket. Mayor Andrew A. Casassa will oppose him in the election.*

Final returns in Revere's mayoralty primary gave: O'Brien, 4905; Casassa, 4495; Carroll, 2026; Brodbine, 1450.

ATTLEBORO—Frank R. Sweet, jewelry manufacturer, tops a field of three candidates, in his first attempt to gain the office.*

GARDNER—A margin of 424 votes separates Mayor James A. Timpany from his rival in a successful fight for re-election.*

GLOUCESTER—Gloucester's "grand old man of politics," Mayor George H. Newell, selected to succeed himself.*

HAVERHILL—Nearly 78 per cent of the registered vote turns out to return Mayor George E. Dalrymple to office.*

NEW BEDFORD—The mill city still on the line for Mayor Charles S. Ashley, returned to office for his 27th term.*

Turbulent election battles in Revere, Quincy and in other cities were at and end today, the greatest upset being recorded in Revere, where Mayor Andrew A. Casassa trailed City Treasurer James M. O'Brien for the mayoralty nomination. Mayor Charles A. Ross was re-elected in Quincy after a close fight.

It was Revere's first non-partisan primary and proved a stunning surprise as O'Brien, with a 410-vote lead, topped the incumbent, Casassa.

4-CORNERED FIGHT

Exactly 12,957 votes or 86.2 per cent of the total registration turned out in Revere under the watchful eyes of state police, special officers and election supervisors appointed by Governor Ely.

The Revere election was a four-cornered fight, with charges and counter-charges in an issue of "gangsterism" giving the city one of its hotest mayoralty battles in years.

Representative Thomas F. Carroll and former State Senator Conde Brodbine were the losers in the fight for nomination for mayor. Both had raised the issue of "gangsterism" and this, it appeared today, may be the chief issue in the election when a record vote is expected to be cast.

Tax collector Ernest Acker will be opposed by Lawrence Gillis for that post on election day. Councilman Thomas U. Kelly and School Committeeman Paul Wallace will fight it out for city treasurer.

One of the major shocks in the Revere election was the failure of Councilman Michael Morelli to repeat for a nomination in Ward 3. S. Parker and Joseph Del Grosso led him. Morelli had been elected four times to the council. He is a brother of Al Morelli, wrestling referee and well known sports figure.

A counting delay in Precinct 1, Ward 4, one of the largest in the city, held up finl returns until 7:30 o'clock this morning. Checkers and counters worked all night at the polls.

Mayor Charles A. Ross of Quincy declared his reelection was due to "taking politics out of the City Hospital."

The election in Quincy, one of the most hard fought in years, showed an outpouring of 84 per cent of the city's registered voters and gave Mayor Ross a plurality of 1914 votes over his opponent, former Mayor Thomas J. McGrath. Ross succeeds himself for a second term.

CURTIN LEADS

The vote was, Ross, 15,711; McGrath, 13,797.

Winners in the battle for councillor-atllarge seats for a term of two years were Laurence J. Curtin, now president of the council; former Councillor Edward Carson and Edward Sandberg, a former representative.

Curtin polled 15,175 votes; Carson, 14,041, and Sandberg, 12,956.

Mrs. Edna B. Austin, Quincy's first woman candidate for the office of councillor, lost. Myron Lane and Arthur B. Curtis were also defeated.

Roy Prout, with 17,960, and George W. Abele, with 12,782, defeated John Morley and Joseph W. Pinel for the school board. Former State Senator David McIntosh was chosen to fill the vacancy in the council from Ward 1, caused by the death of John J. Hurley.

A measure to place all city employes on a pension system won overwhelmingly, the vote being: Yes, 18,050; No, 4,531. Previously, only firemen, police and laborers were eligible for retirement with pay.

A huge victory parade for Mayor Ross was held after the returns were made known.

Engineers Report Scarcity of Labor

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—An optimistic but critical view of the future was taken today by the Society of Mechanical Engineers in its report of progress in management, presented at the annual meeting of the society.

A labor scarcity already has developed in the skilled trades of tool and machine building and maintenance, the report found, and a modest business pickup would leave many capital goods industries unable to find competent men.

Worcester Boy Is Honored at Yale

New Haven, Ct., Dec. 5 (AP)—The list of officers and committees for the final social functions and commencement activities of seniors in the Sheffield Scientific School and School of Engineering at Yale was announced today.

Among those elected were Stanley R. Morton of Worcester, Mass., class historian, and John A. Meehan, Jr., of Florence, Mass., on senior prom committee.

N. H. Funeral for Tragedy Couple

Marsden G. Holman, of Highland avenue, Arlington, and his wife, Bernice C. Holman, whom he shot and killed in Somerville, Monday, before committing suicide, were buried in Keene, N. H., today, following private services in Somerville.

The double funeral was held in Wilson's chapel on College avenue, with Rev. Lynn J. Radcliffe, pastor of the College Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, officiating.

Pupils Oppose Old Age Pension Plan

One of the 120 seniors at the Boston University college of business administration who voted against the Townsend old age pension plan in a college poll, declared that such an expedient would "make us a nation of jellyfish."

Two-thirds of the seniors voted against the measure.

BOOTLEG WAR TO FOLLOW "WET YEAR"

By Associated Press.

Washington, Dec 5—On repeal's first anniversary today the bootlegger remains such a menace to government revenues and the legal trade that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau is reported to be preparing a radio appeal to consumers to buy only legitimate stuff.

Strong demands that taxes be slashed are being prepared for the next Congress on the theory this would hamper the bootlegger.

So far, Secretary Morgenthau has preferred to give the legal campaign against illicit trade more of a trial before urging lower taxes. Since repeal became effective on the evening of December 5, 1933, federal agents have seized 10,947 stills, arrested 21,622 persons and convicted about 7500.

Dr. James M. Doran, head of the distilled spirits code authority, said legal consumption of spirits has been only about one-half of the more conservative estimates made one year ago. He called for stiffer law enforcement.

Government officials estimated the people have drunk 42,000,000 gallons of distilled spirits and 35,000,000 barrels of beer.

The government, which levies a $2 excise tax on each gallon of domestic liquor, has fallen some $120,000,000 short of collecting what it expected. Besides the excise tax, imported liquors are assessed $5 a gallon. Beer is taxed $5 a barrel.

Baby Is 'So Educational'

SANDRA JEAN BURNS

GEORGE BURNS GRACIE ALLEN

"Having a baby is so educational, don't you think?" Gracie Allen of the movies and the radio asks her husband, George Burns. And George, co-parent with Gracie of their adopted daughter, Sandra Jean Burns, four months old, agrees that a fellow lives and learns, and there are cert'nly lotsa things that only a mother—or a daddy—knows. This is a first photograph of the famous comedy team and their infant protege. It was taken at Los Angeles as Gracie and George and Sandra arrived by transcontinental train from New York. 2 Men Arrested on Dope Charges

Arrested for allegedly possessing 1000 grains of dope, John J. Hamilton, 33, of Seaver street, Roxbury, and Charles E. Thompson, 40, of Albion street, West End, faced arraignment in Roxbury district court today.

The arrests were made by Detective Daniel F. Curran and federal narcotic agent Max Roderin in an alleyway off Huntington avenue, Back Bay.

CONSERVATORY SERIES OPENS ON RADIO

By N. F. T.

An impressive musical "mike" setting starts (WAAB) on the stroke of 8 o'clock this evening, under auspices of the Boston Conservatory of Music.

Artists scheduled to take part in the first of these classic quarter hours are: Myrna Sharlow, soprano and George Vieh, pianist. Miss Sharlow is a former member of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York. Mr Vieh has appeared with the Boston Symphony, the St. Louis Symphony and numerous prominent concert orchestras throughout the world.

ALLEN ANTICS

Just for fun, which is why Fred Allen airs his "Town Hall Tonight" hour each Wednesday evening, aside from the money he acquires of course, the whole business (WEEI) builds into the sixty minutes between 9 and 10 o'clock, using a theatrical agency for the principal background. Fred has in mind to place himself in the role of a stage-struck boy, eager for a footlight chance, which by the way, Allen admits having been himself not too many years ago.

Gracie Allen, not related to the aforementioned Fred, takes George Burns and the air audience as well, for a bit of a sleigh ride (WNAC) this evening as the 9:30 to 10 period passes. Jingle bells and som slick ski jumping will occupy the popular pair while Bobby Dolan does the musical duty with his orchestra. Bob and the boys promise an old favorite, "Avalon," along with "Be Still My Heart" and "The Night Was Made for Love' and other current as well as formerly popular selections.

• • •

Plans for celebrating the Xmas holidays will be made known (WNAC) tonight when and if contact is made with the Byrd Expedition down Little America way. That's along there from 10 until 10:30 p. m.

• • •

PICKFORD PLAY

Mary Pickford moves into her dramatic dial place tonight (WEEI) at 8 o'clock, cast in the starring role of "Another Language," the stage play that scored sharply in New York two seasons ago.

• • •

Everett Marshall, he who went away from the "Broadway Varieties" broadcast a while ago, returns to that studio spot this evening (WNAC) at 8:30 p. m.

• • •

FLEETING FLASHES

Eva Hadabrova, soloist from the Vienna Opera and who does not speak a word of English, enters into the guest artist place with Howard Barlow and his symphonic group . . . Locally, the songstress work of Bette Brooks at that food dispensary where the floor show is put over the ozone, is to be taken over by Nancy Nelson, rapidly rising young vocalist . . . Harry (Nick Parkyakakas) Einstein is really going to Hollywood with Eddie Cantor and much of the efforts will be caught by the clicking cameras . . . Mal Hallett hits town with his tune troupe, to open a week of Metropolitan Theater stage syncopating, likewise to do some special WBZ-WBZA broadcasting . . . Big doings in the wind tomorrow night as WEEI facilities are made ready to catch the dance rhythm of Joe Reichman and his orchestra, opening at the Hotel Statler Salle Moderne, replacing the Ansen Weeks aggregation.

'TOYLAND' SKIT ADDED ON AIR

Beginning December 11 the twice weekly radio program, "Babes in Toyland," will be presented every Tuesday, Thursday and Friday according to the sponsors, Sears Roebuck.

The program has been a feature of WNAC at 5:45 for a number of weeks and has afforded amusement for young and old.

Jack and Jill, characters in the skits, do all the things that we ourselves wished to do and each succeeding incident becomes more interesting as we realize that they are really the dreams of any normal youngster.

16 Children in 1 Family Healthy

Methuen, Dec. 5—Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dubois, both 42, are being congratulated on the unusual health of their 16 children.

The ages of the children range from two months to 18 years, all born singly, and all of the children born to them are still living. Dubois is a truck driver, and is 11 days older than his wife.

FREDRIC MARCH TO PLAY OPPOSITE GRETA GARBO IN 'ANNA KARENINA'

Lights and Shadows

By George Holland

That excellent plays with Thomas Mitchell, the actor-director who could boast, if he were given to it, of the longest run in Boston of recent years—that of his performance in "Little Accident" at the Plymouth Theater—is in Boston to aid Lew Brown in slipping the finishing touches to "Calling All Stars," the talent tiarned revue at the Shubert Theater. Mr. Mitchell is helping Mr. Brown with the comedy and the sketches of "Calling All Stars." His handiwork came into play shortly after his arrival, and the Mitchell touch, a bit of re-writing and staging, transformed a good skit called "Hollywood Party" into a tremendous piece of entertainment.

Thomas Mitchell

* * *

Little needs to be done to "Calling All Stars" to make it a smashing revue-success for New York. The show opens there at the Hollywood theater next Thursday night. Functioning gracefully now, after two weeks of playing, the huge musical is in excellent shape. To this observer, the work of Mitzi Mayfair, the little dancing girl with the tip-tilted nose, is remarkable. Mitzi is better than she has been—ever. She works with Jack Whitng in the numbers, and the youngster's talent for acting probably is going to be given a chance before Messrs. Brown and Mitchell finish with the remodeling of the sketches.

* * *

Mr. Mitchell's assignment to "Calling All Stars" came as an interruption to a task of stagework that has occupied him for several weeks. That job is the staging and producing of a play called "Pie in the Sky," scheduled for Boston after the turn of the new year. As if staging and producing a new play were not enough to engage his talents, Mr. Mitchell will act the leading role in "Pie in the Sky." The leading role in "Pie in the Sky," incidentally is the longest male-starring part written in years. Mr. Mitchell faces the duty of memorizing 126 "sides"—a "side" being a page of copy about one-half the size of a sheet of regulation copy paper. So the popular Tommy is too busy to visit with his many friends in Boston.

* * *

Walter Hampden's choice of plays for his Boston week which begins Monday, December 17, includes three from Shakespeare. The other play will be "Richelieu," in which Mr. Hampden is a joy. The Shakespearean plays are "King Richard III," "Hamlet" and "Macbeth." Mr. Hampden will open with "Richelieu," and will repeat this play on Wednesday afternoon and Saturday evening. "King Richard III" will be played Tuesday and Friday nights, and "Hamlet" (Mr. Hampden's favorite role) will be given on Wednesday night and Saturday afternoon.

Steering straight for a real success as one of the new comediennes, Elaine Arden, the charming young dialectician, who "does" Greek and straight comedy and an original brand of dancing on the Metropolitan stage this week with Ed Lowry, may find herself in a New York musical show more speedily than she figures, this department is informed. The scouts have sent the word along that the girl is startling. Her husband, Harry Irving, got his "break" last month. He wrote "Black Fury," the new Paul Muni picture, and Warner Brothers paid the author $20,000 for the original scenario, probably a record-price in many years for an unproduced, unpublished piece of scribbling.

Sally Eilers Will Be Co-Star With Chester Morris in "It Happened in New York"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

Los Angeles, Dec. 5 (US)—You couldn't say that Fredric March is being typed, his screen performances have been too varied. But you can say that he is going to have a hard time escaping producers who want him for Tolstoy roles. He played opposite Anna Sten in "We Live Today" ("Resurrection"), and now he will play opposite Greta Garbo in "Anna Karenina."

Come what may, despite Garbo's plans for Christmas in Sweden and the rumor David Selznick's seeking a career outside of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "Anna Karenina" goes into production February 14. And we hope Garbo gets a good picture. She is the favorite of so many people and she hasn't had a smash hit in several years. I wonder if George Cukor will direct? He and David Selznick are reported to have clashed over "David Copperfield." However, Hollywood feuds are seldom permanent.

Louella O. Parsons

* * *

Sally Eilers is certainly making up for lost time. She was off the screen for a number of months before the birth of her baby and several months after and now she starts on her contract with Universal. She and Lee Tracy have just finished "Carnival" for Columbia and she is getting ready immediately to be co-starred in "It Happened in New York" with Chester Morris. Alan Crosland directs and the play by Ward Morehouse and Jean Dalrymple, has a great part for Sally who looks prettier than ever since the arrival of Harry Joe, Jr., known to his loving parents as "Poochie."

* * *

Chatter in Hollywood

Glenda Farrell is no longer looking sad and pensive. She is all well from her recent appendix operation and she has a new interest in her life. She has been dancing and dining with the very attractive Philip Reed. Young Reed, who used to be Genevieve Tobin's shadow, suddenly appeared with the blonde Glenda, each entirely engrossed in the other's company. Philip is a Warner Brothers contract player and very good looking.

Glenda Farrell

Well, Basil Rathbone has his friends. From Johnstown, Pa., you know, the town where they had the flood, comes a very intelligent letter, saying that Basil Rathbone could play the Philo Vance role. Miss Margaret Morgan who writes the letter, says Mr. Rathbone is well suited for mystery roles and certainly has the most fascinating male voice on the screen. Bela Lugosi is another one who has had boosters for the part from which William Powell graduated. Looks as if we had started a contest which, heaven knows, we had no intention of doing when we stated that Otto Kruger was not our choice for Philo Vance.

* * *

A Line or Two

Years ago Samuel Rachman was a power in Paramount. He brought Pola Negri, Emil Jannings and Ernst Lubitsch to the attention of the American public. Then came a change in the picture map and we didn't hear any more of Rachman. Now his daughter, Gina, is here visiting Erich Pommer and getting ready for a motion picture debut. Edith Craig, widow of Richey Craig, Jr., who died only a year or so ago, is working on shorts at RKO. She will be promoted shortly to one of the interesting roles in "Roberta." Al Santell who spent three months in England without ever making a picture, returned to Hollywood today. Al had a quarrel with Toeplitz, the producer who sent for him to come to England, and it seems it was all over a story. Rather than take a chance on what he was afraid might not turn out right, Al gave up the job and come back home.

Radio Audition

The new radio audition contest series, to be featured every Wednesday evening, will open at the Bowdoin Square tonight. New England amateurs, with radio ambitions, will be given an opportunity at these weekly Bowdoin auditions, to perform before the microphone and before the Bowdoin audiences, and Earle Nelson, popular radio favorite, will preside as master of ceremonies.

On the screen at the Bowdoin is Jack Benny's musical film, "Transatlantic Merry-Go-Round."

New Film Fare Has "Evelyn Prentice"

"Evelyn Prentice," an exciting drama fashioned from the novel by W. E. Woodward, will be one of the feature attractions on the screen at Loew's State tomorrow. Una Merkel, Isabel Jewell, Frank Conroy, Harvey Stephens, Jessie Ralph, Henry Wadsworth, Edward Brophy and little Cora Sue Collins are in the cast, which stars the now famous screen pair, Myrna Loy and William Powell. Since the success of "The Thin Man," this star combination has been among Hollywood's most popular, and is said to be perfectly cast in the new Cosmopolitan production, which has been directed by W. K. Howard.

On the same program is "The Gay Bride," adapted from the widely read Saturday Evening Post story by Charles Francis Coe, "Repeal," with Carole Lombard as the star. The supporting cast includes Chester Morris, Leo Carrillo, Zasu Pitts, Nat Pendleton, Sam Hardy and Walter Walker.

* * *

Opening on the screens at the Paramount and Fenway the new program is topped by "Hell in the Heavens," in which Warner Baxter appears as the daring aviator in the Lafayette Escadrille. Conchita Montenegro is the charming heroine.

APPLE GREEN CURTAINS draped from the ceiling of the two-story ballroom whose walls are painted a rich ivory, a huge cluster of white crysanthemums on the table on the speakers' platform, and rows of eager and interested faces combined to make a pleasant setting for the talk by Dr. George Vincent, former president of the Rockefeller Foundation, yesterday afternoon, before an audience of members and friends of the English Speaking Union.

KATHERINE WINTHROP

The guests were greeted at the doors of the Junior League ballroom by two very recent brides, Mrs. Charles E. Channing (Katherine Thayer) and Mrs. Thomas Whiteside (Christiana Bartlett), and Miss Catherine Winthrop, who served as ushers and later as assistant hostesses in the tea rooms . . . Mrs. Channing wore a brick red ascot of velvet with a brown and red tweed dress, and Mrs. Whiteside and Miss Winthrop both were in the fashionable hand knits . . .

* * *

Ruby Red Crepe

SOUVENIR ROSES and pale candles lent their charm to the soft green rooms upstairs in the Junior League, where everyone adjourned for tea after Dr. Vincent's remarks . . . There, Mrs. Alexander Whiteside, in a stunning outfit of ruby red crepe and velvet, poured fresh, hot tea, trying all the while to get the brew strong enough for the many English people there . . . Mrs. George Bemis, in cocoa brown with gold embroidery at the neck and wrists, sat at the other end of the tea table, later being relieved by Mrs. Joseph Hamlen, very smartly attired in black and gold . . .

To be seen enjoying the famous Junior League sandwiches and the pleasant exchange of conversation about the tea tables were Mrs. Charles A. Porter, Mrs. Richard Saltonstall in black with mink, Miss Martha Chapin with Linda Watson, the latter all pink and fresh in a brick red dress and hat . . . Mrs. Charles A. Kidder, Mrs. George Davenport, Mrs. Charles A. Proctor, Mrs. John Woodland, Mrs. Horace Binney, Mr. Harry Gilmore, Miss Jane Bancroft in black Persian lamb, Mrs. Jeffrey de Hauteville Bell in a smart black ensemble which combined kidskin with crepe, Mrs. William B. Cowan, Mrs. George Megrew, Mrs. George Stevens and Mrs. Joseph Smith . . .

Joint Debut in Cambridge Tonight

THE PRETTY WHITE SHOULDERS of Miss Jean Wheeler will be shown off to great advantage over her white taffeta off-the-shoulder bouffant presentation gown with brilliant streamers, as she and Miss Nancy Faxon curtsey to a throng of well wishers at their double debut this evening at the Continental Hotel in Cambridge . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Huntington P. Faxon and Mr. and Mrs. Thorne Lake Wheeler, both of Cambridge, will share host and hostess responsibilities in launching their young hopefuls into the world of society . . .

Pretty little Miss Nancy Faxon, whose dark hair waves in natural curls back from her forehead, has chosen a gown of silver and rose lame for her presentation . . . Mrs. Faxon will wear a black crepe gown with a bodice of silver sequins and net and crepe are combined in the peacock blue gown which Mrs. Wheeler will wear . . .

A group of this year's debutantes and several out of town friends, as well as the ushers will arrive at the Continental in time for the ushers' dinner, full of pep from the cocktail party at Mrs. Richard W. Hall's in honor of the two debs . . . In this jolly young crowd will be the Misses Mary Andrews, Louisa Beane, Rita Faunce, Virginia Faxon, sub-deb sister of Miss Nancy; Geraldine Field, chairman of the new Vincent Club members; Frances Jackson, Margaret S. Hardwick, Priscilla Gano, Peggy Macomber, Ardelle Moseley, Helen G. Hadley, Nancy Rogers, Amelie Sigourney, Olivia Stone, Jane Tracey, Nancy Bowler of Worcester and Helen Porter . . .

Their dinner partners will be the Messrs. Arthur Beane of Cambridge and Edward Seymour of New York, a cousin of Miss Wheeler's, the head ushers, and the Messrs. Proctor Avon, Calvin Faunce, Jr., Richard Gibbs, John E. Harder, Howard Jordan of Chicago, Frank W. Knowlton, John Kingsley, William Locke, Munroe Lyeth of New York, Thomas Ordway, Coleman Munroe, Gerald Piel, Hollis Seavey, Edward B. Simmons, Richard Snyder, Nathan Tenney and Roger U. Wellington.

Governors Invited to Ball

MISS TEDDY KENYON of Waban, noted flier, and Lieut. Norman Bertelson of Beacon street, will leave the East Boston airport Friday morning in a "dawn to dusk" swing over the six New England states to extend invitations personally to the governors of each state and their wives, to attend the first Army, Navy Aviation Ball for the benefit of the Charlotte Cushman Club on Friday, December 14, at the Copley Plaza Hotel . . .

Catherine Walsh

In keeping with the spirit of the ball each governor will be notified by air mail that the flying invitation committee is on the way so they may be free from engagements in order to receive the winged visitors . . .

It is possible that several other society pilots will decide at the last minute to join the parade but they will do this with a staunch warning from the committee not to show off en route by looping the loop or performing any stunts which might prevent their presence at the ball . . . according to present indications the ball will be a jam and one of the most colorful social and military spectacles ever held in Boston . . .

Governor Ely had the privilege this morning of being invited by two debs on the committee, Lucie Hopkins and Catherine Walsh, because the flying socialites were unable to borrow a helicopter in which to make their journey from East Boston to the State House, to include a visit to him in their rounds on Friday . . .

DEBUTANTES BUSY WITH ARMY, NAVY AVIATION BALL DETAILS

MISS ELLEN GRAY — MISS RITA FAUNCE — MISS MARTHA BRENNAN — MISS MARTHA BIRD

IN SOLEMN CONCLAVE as to the ways and means of conducting the Army, Navy and Aviation Ball to a brilliant success, these four popular debutantes meet almost daily with the committee for the ball. Miss Ellen Gray will be presented by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gray of Brookline, at a tea dance on Friday afternoon. Miss Rita Faunce is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Calvin Faunce, Miss Martha Brennan's parents are the William J. Brennans of Jamaica Plain and Miss Martha Bird is the daughter of Mrs. George K. Bird. The ball promises to be one of the season's outstanding events. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Concerts for Young Folk in Cambridge

YOUNGSTERS OF ALL ages will fill the seats of Sanders Theater on Saturday morning for the first of the series of three concerts planned for boys and girls by Russell Ames Cook, who is particularly well known to Bostonians as director of the annual International Music Festival.

Mrs. Frederic L. Day of Garden street, Cambridge, announces that there are a limited number of single seats available for those unable to attend the entire series. This Saturday's concert will be a program of orchestral music by a symphonic ensemble conducted by Mr. Cook.

Recent subscribers include Mme. Amille Mercier, Miss Jean Dodd, Mrs. Albert Beveridge, Mrs. Walter F. Dearborn, Mrs. T. North Whitehead, Mrs. F. S. Kershaw, and Miss Margaret C. Worcester of Cambridge; Mrs. Alexander Forbes of Milton, Mrs. Joseph Worthen of Winchester, Mrs. George A. Bicher of Belmont, and Miss Eleanor Parker of Brookline.

Bernard Zighera, the well known harpist in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be on the January 12 program of chamber music. The Harvard Glee Club will sing a variety of songs with youthful appeal on March 2 when the boys and girls themselves will have an opportunity of sharing in the program by singing one number.

New York has a comparable series of first rate concerts for juniors this winter under the auspices of the Junior League of New York and the Durlach School on Park avenue.

Dinner to Open Campaign

MRS. BERNARD C. WELD, Mrs. H. Parker Whittington, Mrs. Robert Lovett and Mrs. Barrett Wendell are among those who will be at the head table tomorrow evening for the inaugural dinner of the Emergency Campaign of 1935 in the main ballroom of the Hotel Statler, when hundreds of socially prominent speakers outline the purpose of the drive which opens officially on January 14.

Mr. Whittington will entertain at dinner for Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Taylor.

Another dinner party of importance is that of Mrs. Arthur W. Bell, who will have as her guests Mr. and Mrs. S. Eliot Guild of Beacon street and Mr. and Mrs. John G. Flint of Chestnut Hill.

Miss Sarah H. Winslow, who, with Mr. Paul G. Courtney of Wellesley Farms is co-chairman of the dinner, will have at her table Mr. Augustus Hemenway, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Hubbard of Natick, Mrs. Alexander Grant, and Miss Margaret Stoddard. Miss Stoddard, daughter of Mrs. George Howland Stoddard, now resides in Paris and is spending a few weeks in Boston as Miss Winslow's guest.

Mr. and Mrs. William Brace Pratt and Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer A. Seabury will share a table.

Everyone is being listed in the 1935 edition of the American and Advertiser's Who's Who. Are you in on it? If not, a call to Liberty 4000 will give you all the necessary information.

Guild of St. Elizabeth Conducts Annual Christmas Sale

CARDINAL O'CONNELL graciously attended the Christmas sale of the Guild of St. Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon, at the Copley-Plaza, where he personally delivered his donations to the fair and the various tables, the proceeds from which will benefit the St. Elizabeth Day Nursery on Dudley street, Roxbury. He was accompanied by his secretary, Rev. Jeremiah Minihan.

MRS. FRANCES T. JANTZEN, above, who was one of the busy workers at the Christmas sale of the Guild of St. Elizabeth which was held yesterday at the Copley-Plaza.

In holiday spirit we chatted with Mrs. Henry Sigourney gowned in smart black with a red striped scarf; Mrs. Stuart McKaig of New York, sister of Miss Alice Falvey, president of the Guild, who modeled one of the newest popcorn knit Russian hats with her hand knit green wool suit; Mrs. Frank G. Fitzpatrick, in independence blue crepe gown with soft lace vestee (daughter Evelyn was the outstanding bride of last week); Miss Julia Prendergast, generously buying gifts and bestowing them up her friends; Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, in her lovely mink coat and dark red Alpine hat; Mrs. W. C. Endicott; Mrs. Frances T. Jantzen, answering questions about her new son, wearing a combination of black crepe with an orange scarf; Miss Alice Falvey, the very essence of business in her picturesque blue smock with tiny red and blue lacings; and Mrs. William H. Taylor, gold metal fastenings ornamenting her black frock . . . her hat was a Russian turban.

Miss Frances Shea looked very complacent after her bow to society last week, at the Algonquin Club, in tailored black ensemble with a white crepe bib; Miss Jean Kiley, roamed around attired in brown tweed coat and hat; and Miss Alice Jantzen, filled many duties wearing a brown fur coat over her wine red dress . . . very becoming with her dark hair.

Bridge Party

SAUNTERING ACROSS the street to the Hotel Westminster we looked in upon the Cecilian Guild Christmas bridge party and watched a large audience intent upon winning very attractive vanities as trophies at the tables. Mrs. Frank S. Lane looked stunning in a black wool dress with intricately cut sleeves of tiny ruffled black lace and three brilliant buttons at the bib collar across the front; Mrs. Gerard Slattery, blonde and dainty in peacock blue crepe and a delightful smile; Jean Rooney, Mrs. Walter J. Rooney to you, in smart yellow and brown wool and small brown turban; Mrs. Joseph McDonough, who, by the way, has been selected to lead the committee for the gala supper-dance next month at the Hotel Vendome, quite lovely in black with a white sequin collar and Russian hat.

Mrs. Charles Garraghan, to be found at most affairs charitable, was attired in a green wool suit and matching hat; Mrs. Edgar Arcand, dark and striking, wearing a paplum frock of deepest green crepe; Mrs. Thomas Cavanaugh, chairman of the day, adding up the proceeds, mustard crepe overblouse and black skirt, set off by a vagabond black hat with a gold feather; Hannah Reardon, a very charming miss, in rust and brown; Mrs. John Morton of the committee, quite chic in black with white fur collar and black hat.

Trinity Salon

Next Friday evening, Dec. 7, the Rev. John E. Sexton, D. D., will address the Trinity College Salon being held at the home of Miss Mary Herrick of Newtonville. Dr. Sexton, professor at St. John's Seminary, Brighton, and an eminent authority and lecturer, is nationally known in the field of ecclesiastical history.

Miss Ruth Mahoney of Dorchester, who is acting as chairman for this December salon, has the following on her reservation list: Mr. and Mrs. Andrew F. Lane of Newton Center; Mr. and Mrs. William J. Mahoney of Watertown; Mr. and Mrs. George S. Clarkson of Dorchester; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamilton of Cambridge; Dr. and Mrs. Daniel J. McSweeney, of Milton; Mr. and Mrs. John E. Mahoney of West Newton; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Tague of Jamaica Plain.

Mrs. Anderson Opens Home for Sale

MRS. LARZ ANDERSON will open her town house at 123 Commonwealth avenue on Thursday and Friday of this week for an exhibition and sale of articles made by men disabled in the World War.

The exhibition will begin each day at 11 o'clock and will continue until 6. Tea will be served from 4 until 6 both days, with Miss Edith S. Ticknor, Miss Anna Weld, Miss Anna Gage and Miss Gertrude Peabody as pourers.

The articles on display will be from the Disabled Ex-Servicemen's Exchange, whose shop is at 355 Boylston street. This exchange acts as a clearing house for the handiwork of men disabled in the World War and has carried on since its foundation in 1922 in the interest of these men.

Mrs. Anderson is a vice-president of the organization.

British Group Plans Ball

THE BRITISH CHARITABLE Society and its woman's auxiliary will hold their 25th annual charity ball on Saturday night, December 8, at the Copley-Plaza. Honorary chairmen of this important social event are Stead W. Rodgers, president of the society, and Mrs. Charles B. Lamont, president of the woman's auxiliary. Ralph V. Grandison will serve his seventh term as chairman.

Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador, and Lady Lindsay, head the list of patrons and patronesses, and Governor and Mrs. Joseph B. Ely, Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield and Mrs. Mansfield, Sir Gerald Campbell, British consul general at New York, and Lady Campbell, and Hugh Alexander Ford, consul general at Boston, are the others of the official families who will serve on the patrons' list.

The other sponsors are Mr. and Mrs. Allan Forbes, Mr. and Mrs. Vaughan Jealous, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Carnegie Steele, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Tod, Mr. and Mrs. G. Herbert Windeler and Mr. and Mrs John I. Wylde.

Barn Dance

Final plans have been completed by the committee of the Associated Courts of the M. C. O. F. of South Boston for their costume-barn dance this evening at the Municipal Building, Broadway, South Boston. Prizes will be awarded for costumes.

Given in Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge frightened at Lee Chow's unusual manner, flees from the room to the arms of her father.

CHAPTER 209

TO MOST women, moonlight filtering through three branches, making a grassy lawn look like an enchanted ballroom for fairies, brings romantic thoughts of tender passages in their youth

I have my own memories connected with moonlight, but it is not of them I shall think when next I see a moonlit garden. I am afraid that I poignantly shall recall the feeling when the last car left the farm yard for the midnight drive to the ocean, leaving me alone on the lawn with Lee Chow.

Savagely I scored myself for my cowardice. Even if the Chinese meant physical harm to me, which was too fantastic a conjecture for even my excited imagination, he was so weakened by his recent experience with the poisoned dart contained in Marion's lock box that I easily could have prevented his doing me any hurt; indeed, could have rendered him distinctly hors de combat in any struggle between us

But though I clinched my fingers into my palms until the nails hurt my flesh almost unbearably, I could not keep my knees from trembling as Lee Chow spoke in the calm, almost monotonous tones he always used.

"It is a little too cold for you out here, I am afraid," he said. "Will you not come back into the house?"

He stepped aside for me to precede him

I might have been going to my execution, or to some trial by torture, if my unreasoning fears were any indication of what awaited me. And when, in the hall, I compelled myself to turn and meet those eyes, suddenly devoid of all expression, I could hardly get out the commonplace, courteous response which his simple request invited.

But, after all, I reminded myself sternly, I had no other course but to offer him courteous commonplaces, and then to listen to whatever he had to say. Never, in all my long association with him, had he given me any reason to suspect that he had any theory of life incompatible with the ideals of an honorable man

FEAR OF LEE CHOW

"Will you come into the living room? There is still a fire in the grate."

"There is a better one in your little study off the library," he said. "As neither of us is in perfect health, I think we would better go there. I should not like you to have a chill on my account."

I almost laughed hysterically at the unconscious irony of his words, for I was exerting all my will power to conceal the trembling of my body from the chill which had crept over it for no other reason but sheer fear of him. And my terror was increased by the thought of being shut up with him in my little study, which, although it adjoins the library, is yet singularly remote from the rest of the house, having been added to the original structure as an afterthought upon the part of its first owner a century before

"The study will suit me perfectly," I said mendaciously, but I made our progress to it as slow as possible, and, once inside the door, I spoke quickly with my hand still on the door knob.

MADGE ESCAPES

"Will you please excuse me?" I said. "I shall be back in a minute or two. I find that I have mislaid my evening bag, and I must find it. Just draw up that big chair to the fire and make yourself comfortable."

I did not wait for an answer or possible protest, but swung open the door and passed through it as I uttered the last words. Then I went noiselessly but swiftly through the hall to the front of the house.

The library door into the hall swung open as I neared it, and my hand went to my throat in stark, unreasoning fear. Had Lee Chow come through the door connecting the study with the library, and did he mean to intercept me?

"Margaret!" the most dependable voice in the world said softly.

With a rush of relief and gratitude I looked into the kind, loving eyes of the man who never had failed me since finding me, after his heartbreaking quest for me.

"Father!" I whispered, and, swaying, I felt myself caught and held in my father's arms.

Christmas Wreath Salad

4 slices canned pineapple
½ pound red grapes
Small tin peaches
16 Campfire marshmallows
1 banana
4 Maraschino cherries

Using a sharp knife, cut centers from rings of canned pineapple so that the remaining ring is only ½ inch wide. Place this outside ring in a nest of crisp lettuce. Chop the center of the pineapple and add diced canned peaches; banana, sliced, and marshmallows, cut into quarters. Moisten the fruit using mayonnaise dressing and place a mound of the salad in the center of the ring of pineapple. Wash grapes, cut in half and remove seeds. Place the halves of grapes closely together on the pineapple ring to represent holly berries. Complete the wreath by placing on it a bow made from a Maraschino cherry. (Cut the cherry almost in half once, then turn and cut almost in half the other way. Spread out the sections of the cherry to form a bow). Place the bow on the wreath and serve.

Beauty Travel Kit for Every Color Type

By Juliet Shelby

PERHAPS IT is the vogue for traveling by air (where luggage has to be adequate but light in weight) that has made cosmetic houses "kit-conscious." At any rate they are doing splendid jobs in assembling all the necessary aids for skin-care and make-up in compact little cases

The newest of these brilliant thoughts is, to my mind, complete, adequate, good-looking and sensibly assembled. And that's praise from a hardened old beauty veteran who sees practically every new cosmetic that is marketed

• • •

You can tuck this kit into the smallest of your week-end bags and still have room for the rest of your duds, or if you are traveling lighter than light, put your [illegible] in your hand-bag and carry this under your free arm! And you needn't have the slightest qualm that you left "something" behind, for there are traveling-size jars of liquefying cream, tissue cream, protective cream, face powder, skin tonic, lipstick, eyebrow pencil, rouge, eye-shadow and finishing lotion.

And (make a note of this) the colors of make-up vary according to type. Yes, ma'am; stamped on a card and slipped under the cellophane wrapper is "Medium Blonde—blue or gray eyes, cream skin," or in other words, an indication of the assemblies of make-up it contains.

It's a white, flexible imitation leather case and is festively tied and bowed with red satin ribbon and holly. You could order a half-dozen by telephone, selecting them according to the types of the intended recipients, and so simplify your Christmas shopping.

• • •

There is no doubt in my mind that any woman who is fortunate enough to get one for Christmas would find it extremely useful on the next jaunt she takes. And what's more, the products are from a well-established cosmetic house, and the price of the pretty affair is one that will convince you that I haven't been too enthusiastic.

• • •

You may learn the name of this beautiful kit and where it is sold by phoning Liberty 4000 and asking for Miss Shelby. If you prefer writing for this information, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to her at the Boston Evening American, Boston.

New Easy Four-Piece Dress

By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9209

If you've been thinking for a long time about making your own clothes but have been a little afraid to start in, here's the very pattern for you! Just notice the little sketch at the side—there are only four pieces to the whole body of the dress! Choose a pretty inexpensive cotton fabric, either patterned or plain, for the material and don't forget to get nice bright buttons to set off the chic sleeve line, tabbed belt and pointed patch pockets. When you finish you'll probably be so delighted with the result that you'll set to work on a tailored dress or a party frock immediately!

Pattern 9209 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards 36 inch fabric.

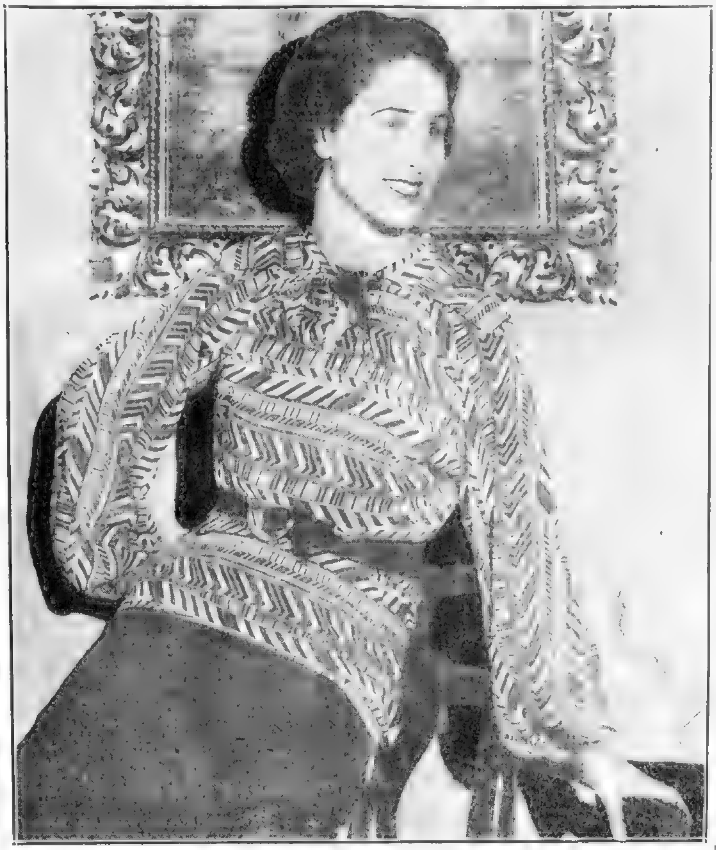
Mexico and Russia Are Newest Allies---In Fashion World



LIKE SEEING the first spring robin—seeing the first mid-season print! And to find it in a real budget department offering is what makes it still more marvelous . . . this little crepe tunic over an alpaca skirt. The print is as Russian as the czardas, and the colors are as Mexican as chili con carne. So there you have your newest international entente cordiale.

Miss Rita Faunce, debutante from Jamaica Plain, happened to model the muddy blue skirt and sage green, clay, white and sun-drenched vermillion printed blouse combination. There are others, of course.

Miss Faunce is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Calvin B. Faunce. Brunette, with a creamy shaded skin and blue gray eyes, she is particularly fond of warm grays and dusty pastels.

If you wish for details on the frock shown, which is from a Boston shop, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, including a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Mince Meat Betty Is Light, Spicy Dessert

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

MINCE MEAT PIE, that most innocent of desserts with which we are wont to top off the traditional holiday dinner, was at one time shrouded in gloomy disapproval.

Frowned on by our Quaker ancestors as "an hodge-podge of superstition and a wicked manifestation of the devil and all his works," this luscious sweet meat fell into ill repute.

Even religious tracts were written advising the devout to "preach down superstitious minc'd pyes." The objections, never quite clear, were perhaps based on a prejudice against the rare spices and strange delicacies from the sumptuous Orient, a symbol of high living from afar. But, despite these warnings, mince meat continued as a favorite holiday dessert.

The good people of that day, like-minded with us in their approval of this tempting dish, handed down their favorite recipes to our generation. Today we can enjoy mince meat without either conscience qualms or the bustling holiday preparation of olden days

Jars or tins of ready prepared mince meat made of luscious fruits and sugar, spiced and seasoned to perfection, should stand by on pantry shelves ready for the holiday siege.

MINE MEAT BETTY

4 large apples
1-3 cup sugar
1 cup water
1 dozen vanilla wafers
½ cup mince meat
4 marshmallows

Peel and slice the apples. Add the sugar to the water and then add apples and cook until tender. Crush the vanilla wafers and sprinkle 1-3 of the crumbs over bottom of buttered shallow baking dish. Cover with a layer of apple. Dot mince meat and marshmallows, cut in small pieces, over apples. Repeat each layer, having a layer of crumbs on top. Pour juice from apples (½ cup) around sides and bake in hot oven (400 deg.) for 20 minutes. Just before serving, cover top with marshmallows and brown quickly. Serve hot.

MINCE MEAT CREAM FILLING FOR SPICE CAKE

¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 cup milk
2 slightly beaten eggs
1 tablespoon butter
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup mince meat
½ teaspoon vanilla

Mix sugar and cornstarch. Add milk, slightly beaten egg, butter and salt. Cook over boiling water until thick, then add mince meat and cook for a minute or two longer. Cool and add vanilla. Spread between and on top of layer spice cake. Sprinkle with cocoanut. Cut into squares and serve. Serves 9.

MINCE MEAT DROP COOKIES

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 pound mince meat
2½ cups flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Cream butter, add sugar gradually and cream together. Add eggs and beat until fluffy after the addition of each. Add mince meat. Sift flour (sifted once before measuring) with baking powder and salt, and fold into mince meat mixture. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a greased cooky sheet and bake in a hot oven (400 deg. F) for 15 minutes, 5 dozen cookies.

CEREAL PUDDING

2 cups breakfast cereal (left-over or freshly cooked)
2 tablespoons melted butter
¾ cup milk
2-3 cup mince meat
1 teaspoon cinnamon
4 tablespoons brown sugar

Combine all ingredients and mix thoroughly. Pour into buttered baking dish and sprinkle top with a mixture of brown sugar and cinnamon. Bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for about 40 minutes.

Personal Note for the Bride

By Mrs. Beeckman

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I received an invitation to a wedding reception. Being an invalid (the bride knows of my poor health) I, of course, could not attend. At the time of the wedding I suffered a relapse, and was unable to write a little personal note to the bride (she included one in the invitation).

Just what shall I do now? Shall I still write to her? Shall I address the letter to Mr. and Mrs. (I've never met him)? Just what shall I write?

I cannot afford to send a gift as I have many doctor bills to pay. She, the bride, is just a business acquaintance both of us working in the same office. P.

Yes, it would be just the thing for you to write this friend, thanking her for her kind invitation and for the added graciousness of her enclosed personal note to you. Tell her how much you would have loved to come to her wedding, explain why you were not able to answer her note at the time of her wedding, tell her of your good wishes for her happiness, and include in your note, too, your congratulations to her husband. Address your letter only to the bride, but, even though you do not know her husband, extend your congratulations to him in the note.

Don't worry at all about your not being able to send her a gift—she will surely thoroughly understand. And I do hope that you will be well soon—my friendliest greeting to you, and best wishes.

Lotion for Reducing

Question: I am inclined to be thin. However, I have a very large stomach which looks simply terrible in tight dresses. Can you tell me of something to do to reduce my stomach.

Madeleine H., Roslindale.

Answer: I have a recipe for a camphor reducing lotion, also a wood chopping exercise and a waist exercise. These should all help in reducing the stomach. You may have both the lotion and the exercises by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston.

A number of letters on beauty inquiries are being held up because stamped, self-addressed envelopes were not enclosed. In writing for information on the names of beauty articles, stamped envelopes must accompany the inquiries if a personal answer is desired. The required information will be sent to persons whose letters bear the following signatures, if they will repeat their questions and send the necessary postage.

Facial Depilatory

Question—I have a problem which may sound foolish, but nevertheless, it has caused me a great deal of worry, and I know of no permanent remedy for it. I have an amount of superfluous hair growing in my nose, and to make matters worse, I have large nostrils, therefore, the hair is very noticeable. I will be very grateful if you could tell me of some permanent remedy? I am twenty-one years old.

MARIANNE, Chelsea.

Answer—There is a depilatory on the market which is really safe to use for this purpose. It is one of the few depilatories which may be used without injurious effect for hair on the upper lip. As trade names are never mentioned in this column, I will be glad to tell you where it can be bought, if you will send a stamped, self addressed envelope to me. Merely address it to Juliet Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston.

Christmas at White House Is Time of Cheery Open Fires and Waxen Candles

A Safe Tournament Overtrick

By Josephine Culbertson

It is a well-known axiom of Rubber Bridge play that one [illegible] almost never risk the contract in order to make an extra trick. In tournament play, however, one very often takes such risks, as the extra trick represents so much more [illegible] than in Rubber Bridge.

Occasionally a hand comes up in which an astute player will perceive a line of play which may gain an extra trick and yet not endanger the making of his contract. Such a hand was played in a recent duplicate match, but, surprisingly enough, only a few players made the extra trick and one luckless wight was misguided enough to take an unjustified risk and be set.

North, Dealer.
Neither side vulnerable

North: ♠ A 8; ♡ K 3 2; ♢ Q J 8 3; ♣ A J [illegible] 6
West: ♠ 9 7 4; ♡ [illegible] 6; ♢ [illegible] 5 4 2; ♣ 9 5 4
East: ♠ K J 10 5 2; ♡ 10 8; ♢ A K; ♣ Q [illegible] 3 2
South: ♠ Q 6 3; ♡ A Q J 7 5 4; ♢ 10 7; ♣ K [illegible]

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣ (1)	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡ (2)	Pass	4 ♡ (3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) The hand is too strong for an original non-vulnerable bid of one notrump. North therefore makes an approach bid.

(2) As South's free overcall indicates a reasonably strong hand, North is [illegible] justified in inviting the game.

(3) South of course does not [illegible] contract for four.

W[illegible] opened [illegible] [illegible] W[illegible] [illegible] King [illegible] was sure [illegible] spade [illegible] was [illegible] especially [illegible] diamond [illegible] This might be [illegible] or second club [illegible] the loss of the finesse would permit the opponents to defeat the contract as they actually did [illegible] where the finesse was taken.

Those who made the extra trick [illegible] in the [illegible] 2 and 3, [illegible] Ace of [illegible] Jack of [illegible] Queen of [illegible] If a [illegible] South [illegible] even if West [illegible] with the Queen [illegible] could be lost since the diamond would have been lost in any event. If East covered South would trump. Since the heart King had been carefully preserved as an entry, the dummy could be re-entered and the good club cashed for a diamond discard. A low spade lead up to the Queen would then set up that card and the declarer could spread his hand for five-odd.

Scientists on Lonely Isle Probe Mystery Deaths

Los Angeles, Dec. 5—Solution of death and disappearance mysteries as [illegible] as any that ever confronted a [illegible] of fiction was sought [illegible] the [illegible] Galapagos Islands [illegible] by a party of scientists.

Radio messages said the party headed by Captain G. Allan Hancock expected to [illegible] the bodies of two men found on the uninhabited and waterless Marchena Island and to confirm the theory of shipwreck and starvation after enmity among the half dozen inhabitants of Charles Island.

The bodies have been tentatively identified by a Los Angeles mariner as Alfred Rudolph Lorenz of Paris and Arthur Estampa, a Norwegian, both inhabitants of the [illegible] Galapagos.

[illegible] also hoped to learn about the reported disappearance of Baroness Eloise Bousquet de Wagner, formerly of Vienna and Paris, who brought Lorenz to Charles Island three years ago.

Charles Island is the habitation of Dr. Friedrich Ritter, of Berlin and his mate, Frau Dore Strauch [illegible].

Baroness de Wagner, Dr. Ritter wrote Captain Hancock last July, left Charles Island with Robert Philippson some time ago. Dr. Ritter stated there was something about the affair that he dared not write but that he would like to talk personally with Captain Hancock.

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

The news comes from France that the French police have gone puritan.

They have raided Montmartre and Montparnasse, those famous centers of Parisian night life, toward which the American tourists have been accustomed to gravitate like the proverbial moths to the proverbial flame.

Robt. E. Rogers

The excuse appears to have been a double one: first, to clean up the dives and dumps which cater particularly to Americans and their inhibitions; second, to rid the country of international spies and terrorists, upon whose activities a lurid light has been shed by the assassination of King Alexander of Jugoslavia on French soil.

So far so good. But worse is yet to come. As a matter of fact it has come already.

On Saturday night last the police staged a sensational raid at Nice on the Riviera, bagging some 550 persons in various establishments.

The reasons given are the same with perhaps a greater emphasis on the necessity for a moral clean-up. The police heads insist that these raids will continue "until the entire Riviera will be made as safe as a church.

Monte Carlo Next?

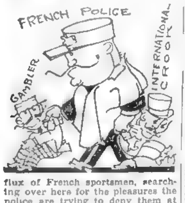
Only 27 were held, though described as international criminals and slated for deportation. Next on the program will undoubtedly be the old principality of Monaco, the attraction of which is Monte Carlo, the famous gambling center of the Western world.

This clean-up will probably not affect the American tourist as much as it would have a few years ago. If the good American, who habitually and according to tradition, seeks out Montmartre and Monte Carlo doesn't like the new regime he can come back where he went from.

He no longer has to go abroad for his liquor, and the signs are clear that very shortly he will not have to go abroad for his gambling, horse racing, dog racing, lotteries and other specialties of European civilization.

As for international crooks, gangsters, racketeers, et al., he can still find them at home in large numbers.

Perhaps we may even see an influx of French sportsmen, searching over here for the pleasures the police are trying to deny them at home. They should have no difficulty in finding them.



But the serious aspect of the question is the effect on the writers of fashionable fiction, of detective and mystery stories, of the tales of international political intrigue.

E. Phillips Oppenheim, for instance, is an elderly man now. Most of his stories—running into the hundreds—have been written

But one cannot but guess with alarm what would have happened had Monte Carlo been cleaned up 20 years ago. The man would have had nothing to write about!

Monaco's Ivy Lee

It is probably safe to say that the majority of Oppenheim's stories of crime and intrigue have been set amid the luxurious surroundings of Monte Carlo and the Cote D'Azur, to the constant accompaniment of rich foods, precious liquors, tennis clubs, hotels de luxe, fast cars, and the hectic atmosphere of the gambling rooms.

I do not expect that Oppenheim, that "prince of story tellers," ever got a rakeoff from the Casino. But surely he was its best advertising agent.

He was the Ivy Lee of Monte Carlo.

But now, alas, if the police succeed in their nefarious attempt, Othello's occupation is gone! And Scott Fitzgerald's latest novel "Tender Is the Night," laid near Nice, would have been flat, stale and unprofitable without the excessively picturesque background of the Riviera and its vices.

I suggest that the Amalgamated Union of English-Speaking Yarn Spinners get together and agree on some other center of Romance Possibly in Europe. Possibly, even in America Tia Juana and Miami have been overplayed

Why not give Massachusetts a break? Surely, as soon as the proper deals have been made, we can set up a rendezvous within easy access of the State House which can become the American Monte Carlo.

And perhaps offer Mr. Oppenheim a little something to popularize it for the world sporting trade. Progress is progress!

COUNT Accused IN SUIT

FATHER OF GIRL, PRINCESS SAYS

NOW ENGAGED TO NIECE OF OGDEN MILLS

Paris, Dec. 5 (INS)—A sensational damage suit was filed today by Princess Nadejda Scherbatov, widely-known Russian noblewoman, against Count Louis de Brantes, son of a marquis, recently engaged to an Anglo-American girl, according to Reuter's Agency.

The princess demands 1,000,000 Francs (approximately $66,000) damages and a allowance, as well as insisting the count acknowledge the paternity of her 3-year-old daughter.

Lady Forbes

Engagement of Count De Brantes to Lady Moira Forbes, daughter of the earl and countess of Granard and a niece of Ogden L. Mills, was announced on November 20 in London.

The princess asks 1,000,000 francs for "rupture of relations" with the count and 5000 francs (approximately $330) as a monthly allowance The suit was filed in the Seine tribunal, Reuter's stated.

The princess is a daughter of Prince Paul Scherbatov, former aide de camp to Grand Duke Michael of Russia. Her grandfather was Prince Vladimir Bariatinsky general-in-waiting to the late Tsar Alexander III and a personal friend of the late Queen Victoria. He accompanied Alexander on a world tour when the latter was heir to the Russian throne.

Princess Nadejda accompanied the Count De Brantes on an expedition to the Sahara in March, 1932, and claimed to be the first woman to penetrate the haggar desirt.

Lady Forbes' engagement to De Brantes was announced after she broke a previous engagement to the Marques De Brissac.

Vienna, Dec 5—A mausoleum believed to be that of a king of Antioch in Syria, one of the successors of Alexander the Great, has been excavated at Ephesus in Asia Minor by the Austrian Archeological Institute with funds of the Rockefeller Institute.

The discovery rates with the mausoleum of Helicarnassus, which is one seven wonders of the ancient world.

The expedition may be forced to abandon the excavation, due to lack of funds, although the mausoleum is only half exposed.

YEAR'S END SEES HOPE OF TUFVERSON CASE "BREAK"

This is Agnes C. Tufverson, mysteriously missing bride of Capt. Ivan Poderzaj, Czechoslovakian adventurer and alleged bigamist, now held in Vienna. The wedding was just a year ago.

Here is Capt. Ivan Poderzaj, whom United States authorities hope to extradite from Austria on a charge of bigamy. If brought to this country he will be questioned concerning the disappearance of his 16-day bride, the former Agnes C. Tufverson.

Mme. Suzanne Ferrand, above, was arrested in Vienna with Capt. Ivan Poderzaj. She is alleged to have been Poderzaj's wife when he married Agnes C. Tufverson.

This is Selma, sometimes called "Sally," Tufverson, sister of the missing Agnes C. Tufverson. Selma's search for her vanished kinswoman called attention of police of two continents to the Tufverson-Poderzaj mystery.

HUNT FOR LOST BRIDE FAILS

PODERZAJ CASE MYSTIFIES INVESTIGATORS

By Universal Service

New York, Dec. 5—A year ago today there began in the Little Church Around the Corner one of the most puzzling mysteries of international romance in recent years.

On Dec. 4 1933, Agnes Colonna Tufverson, corporation attorney, and Captain Ivan Poderzaj, Czechoslovakian adventurer, were married. They had met a few months before in a London railway station.

Sixteen days after the wedding, on a day on which they were to have sailed for Europe on a honeymoon, Miss Tufverson vanished. Since then she has not been seen, nor, so far as is known generally, has any evidence been found that showed definitely what became of her.

Two more days and Captain Poderzaj sailed for Europe, not on the liner Hamburg, on which honeymoon passage had been engaged, but on the liner Olympic, on which he took passage at the last hour.

A few weeks passed quietly, then Miss Selma Tufverson, sister of December's bride, began quiet inquiries that brought her eventually to the missing persons bureau here. Police of two continents took up the search along a trail that led from New York to London and finally to Vienna.

Held in Vienna

In Vienna Poderzaj and Mlle. Suzanne Ferrand were arrested, the former on a charge of "suspicion of murder." Trunks found in their possession held clothing belonging to the missing Miss Tufverson.

But no body was found, and a murder charge lacked support. Poderzaj stood firmly by his story he did not know what had became of his bride.

Police in London discovered that the dashing continental captain had married Mlle. Ferrand there before he married Miss Tufverson here. Therefore, New York indicted him on a charge of perjury in making a false statement on a marriage license. But Austria, still holding him prisoner, announced it could not extradite him on that count because of technicalities.

Mlle. Ferrand was freed while Austria waited the next move of the United States. The next move was a new indictment charging bigamy.

On that ground a formal demand for extradition was made last week, and it was indicated that Austria, wearied of the expense of keeping of the prisoner, would [illegible] the request

Retail Food Prices Decline Again

Washington, Dec. 5—Retail food prices continued to decline slightly during the two weeks ended November 20.

A Labor Department survey covering 51 cities showed that it would have taken $1 14 during those two weeks to buy the same amount of food that would have cost $1 15 two weeks before.

A year ago that same amount would have cost $1.06; two years ago, $.99; and in 1929, $1.59.

SHOWS GAIN IN BATTLE TO SPEAK

By RUTH COWAN
(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press)

Chicago, Dec. 5—Wild amazement, almost terror, shows from the eyes of Patricia Maguire as she struggles to awaken from her long "sleep" of two years, nine months and 22 days.

I saw the girl, whose case, tentatively identified as lethargic encephalitis, or sleeping sickness, has baffled medical science, a year ago, and I saw her today.

I saw surprising signs of improvement apparent even to a layman. I saw definite signs that consciousness had returned in part. I witnessed tests.

I saw her gurgling, gasping struggle to break through a terrible barrier and speak—and I have a feeling she will succeed eventually.

A year ago the pretty 29-year-old girl's eyes had the vacant look of the blind The pupils were cloudy. Today they were clear eyes of hazel and they have vision.

I know she saw me as I stood by her bed today. I sensed she was aware of the presence of a stranger She kept her eyes on me as I backed away.

Last year her eyes rotated aimlessly. Even so I thought she saw a little for the squinted one eye the better to clear the vision in the other. But she did not hold her eyes steady.

Today they are steady and evenly focused. Also there's expression.

Responds to Tests

Her mother, Mrs. Peter Miley, who has never left her side since she lapsed into a coma Feb. 13, 1932, picked up a school child's slate. She said

"I will prove to you that Pat can see and read."

In chalk she wrote:

"Raise your first finger."

The girl's graceful heavy dark brows knotted. Her face contorted. She who last year had lain so passive, squirmed and twisted. She tensed the muscles of her right arm lying outside the covers. Her labored breathing quickened.

"Watch her eyes," whispered the mother.

Slowly — and noticeably — Pat's eyes moved as do the eyes of anyone reading.

Her breathing became deep-throated gurgling as slowly she raised her first finger.

"Now, Pat," commanded the mother, this time orally. "Raise your second finger."

She put it up too a little quicker. The mother moved to the end of the bed. Pat, who last year could not turn her head, nestled down between the covers, her eyes closed, she relaxed.

"Pat," said the clear-voiced mother, "move your right foot."

A quick frown, a gurgle of protest, but in a moment, she whose movements last year were the involuntary tossings of one in delirium, moved her right foot back and forth.

The girl twisted, squirmed, stiffened. She clenched her hands. She rolled her head from side to side, but her eyes, wide and strained, were focussed on the slate. Muscles corded on her throat. Her gurgling became louder, louder. Then distressed with her fearful effort to break through. To speak—

"She will, she will yet," said the mother.

Eddie Casey Resigns; Harvard Looks About For His Successor

Buell, Owen, Hardwick, Little, McKenney Among Army of Prospects

By AUSTEN LAKE

WANTED—A new head coach at Harvard, who embodies utmost persuasion with velvet smoothness. A rugged gent with a limber tongue who can say "No" with a splash. A keen student of boy-nature and gridiron battricks, who can work raw, run-of-the-shop material. Major college experience necessary. Need not be a Harvard grad. Salary suitable. Inquire H. A. A., Cambridge.

Austen Lake

Which means that Eddie Casey, the sincere, courteous, quiet young man, has officially turned in his Harvard uniform and retired to his Winthrop estate.

But don't get killed in the rush for his job, gents!

Because few will be called and only one chosen. And just now Harvard's athletic director, Bill Bingham, has a head full of mental steam that might rival a peanut roaster, shuffling his deck of available ex-Harvard men (Buell, Mahan, Owen, Hardwick) before turning to the outside.

* * *

CASEY ACTUALLY RESIGNED last Wednesday—by telephone. He called Director Bingham and said simply, "I think I've had enough." There was no coercion. He felt that he had simply run out his string and wished to let go. The resignation was not accepted until this morning, when Bingham mailed him a neighborly letter.

Of those who know Casey best, I think I can understand his feelings most sympathetically. Because, from the day, 21 years ago, when we were spindle-legged, lean lads at Exeter Academy, he has been a shy, diffident type whose slender frame bent under the weight of responsibility.

He blushed easily and laughed a quick, nervous, little fox terrier's bark. He was at once the school's athletic hero and its most bashful boy, who traipsed around the ancient halls and paths of Exeter with a fringe of junior worshippers on his coat-tails.

But he hated to hurt anyone's feelings, and that is the main reason why he failed the character of varsity head coach, if I am to measure failure in terms of games won and lost.

No corkscrew finger, wide-eyed glare or howling, graveyard voice had he when his players missed fire. Just a quiet, parson's persuasion and a by-your-leave manner.

* * *

CASEY IS ONE of the coaching sort who shrieks in his sleep of nights and did much internal screaming during the day behind his calm, outward mask. That was what he meant when he telephoned the H. A. A. "I think I've had enough."

Had Casey been a he-man howdy type, a hell-roarer with a neat turn for blasphemy like the late Percy Haughton, he might have instilled a more wholesome respect for his football teachings in the minds of his kids.

I find that the Prussian drillmaster style of coach, who can blister a skin at 40-yard range, is the one who is most venerated by their players, who later whisper his name with a loving curse and recall what hairy-chested apes the world bred in their day. Like Percy Haughton and Frank Cavanaugh and Foster Sanford.

* * *

ARNOLD HORWEEN, WHO PRECEDED CASEY as Harvard coach and has been coming back on holiday excursions ever since, is out of the new picture.

That is positive!

If you want my shotgun guess, I'd say that Harvard will yoo-hoo sweetheart calls to Lou Little, the present Columbia wizard, who I hear can be had at a price within Harvard's wage scale. And, as nearly as maybe, Lou answers the want ad specifications at the head of this column.

With one exception. Lou has written his own ticket down at Columbia, which provides a limited number of athletic scholarships and permits Lou to browse around summers enticing husky schoolboys with glorious word paintings of Columbia. But, where most of the college coaches do this covertly and are distressed when it gets public mention, Lou is quite frank and goes it openly.

"I have no prejudice against a stout lad with muscular calves and thick shoulders," he said to me once. "Columbia is a nice school. If a boy is going to college, why not there?"

But Harvard is finicky about such matters. It has no athletic scholarships, controls no jobs, has no H. A. A. lending fund, wheedles no schoolboys. And it does not intend to go into this phase of the football business. So Lou, or whoever else, will have to carve his teams from the crude, living flesh of volunteer material.

* * *

THE FATE OF CASEY'S ASSISTANTS, Adam Walsh, Myles Lane and Wesley Fesler, will balance on the wishes of the new coach, when he is named. Head coaches, like new major league managers, have their own fancies about assistants, and the newcomer may want to install a fresh system with aids who are familiar with his methods.

I can conscientiously say, from close-up observation, that Director Bill Bingham has never thrust a meddling finger into the selection of a head coach's assistants.

Casey, in departing, says this, as Horween said it before. Casey hired his own helpers, but with his innate dislike for cruelty he sometimes delegated the firing to others rather than suffer the sight of hurt feelings.

So Walsh, Lane and Fesler, as fine a set of personable, wind-blown types as there is in a game which develops clear eyes, square chins and fair play, are going to sit hugging their knees on the anxious seat for the better part of this winter and next spring.

The selection of Casey's successor is going to be a deliberate affair. Bingham does not want to go through a spasm of refiring and rehiring for many years to come. He is picking this man for keeps. So he hopes.

'ACE' CHEERED BY FINDINGS OF DOCTOR

By Bill Grimes

During the past six weeks, Irving "Ace" Bailey experienced two bad spells, which alarmed the Toronto Maple Leaf Club to such an extent that they insisted their former star right winger accompany the team to Boston and undergo a thorough examination by Dr Donald Munro.

"Ace" looks to be in fine condition, better in fact than he has in years. Since he returned home last February, he has taken the best of care of himself. He has been out in the open as much as possible and spent a month hunting and fishing up in his old home town, Bracebridge, Ont.

He was in such fine condition that he was appointed coach of the West Toronto Juniors, which is a Maple Leaf amateur farm. He skated with his charges during practice but has been careful not to overtax himself.

About a month ago, however, he jumped out of bed and crashed into the wall, rendering himself unconscious. A week or so ago, he had another bad spell.

WARNED AGAINST WORRYING

Just as soon as Dr. J. W. Rush, the Maple Leaf physician, was advised of Bailey's condition, he arranged for "Ace" to come here for a consultation with Dr. Munro. During the check up, Dr. Munro was unable to uncover any ailment and stated that the examination showed the former star was in good health.

Although he avoided any mention of his setbacks, "Ace" was in a better mental condition after his examination than when he arrived here. He appeared to be a little nervous just before he departed for the City Hospital but last night at the Garden he was himself again.

During his examination, Bailey was again cautioned about worrying, a thing which Dr. Munro stressed before he allowed "Ace" to return home last February. Whether or not Dr. Munro advised against Bailey's acting as a hockey coach was not divulged.

CONACHER SCORES

With "Ace" perched in the press section, Toronto Maple Leafs shut out the Bruins, 1 to 0. It was another thrill producing battle, during which bad feeling cropped out at times but was never allowed to get far enough to develop into serious trouble.

Although the Maple Leafs are one of the best N. H. L. attractions, the hustling, heads-up brand of hockey the Bruins have been playing of late had a great deal to do with the large crowd that trekked to the Garden.

Big "Chuck" Conacher scored the only goal of the evening. In the first period, Capt. "Happy" Day broke away from his defense position, after a Bruin rush. Babe Seibert was alone of the Boston defense, and he did not have a chance when Day gave Conacher an almost wing to wing pass which the big right wing took going at top speed.

Conacher was inside before Seibert was able to check him, and then it was a two-man duel between Conacher and Tiny Thompson. Conacher raced across the front of the Boston cage, faked to make Tiny declare himself and then just when he appeared to have overskated the net flipped the puck home for the lone goal.

KAMINSKY WILL HELP

It was a perfect play by Day and Conacher and one that any goalie would need a barrel of horseshoes to break up.

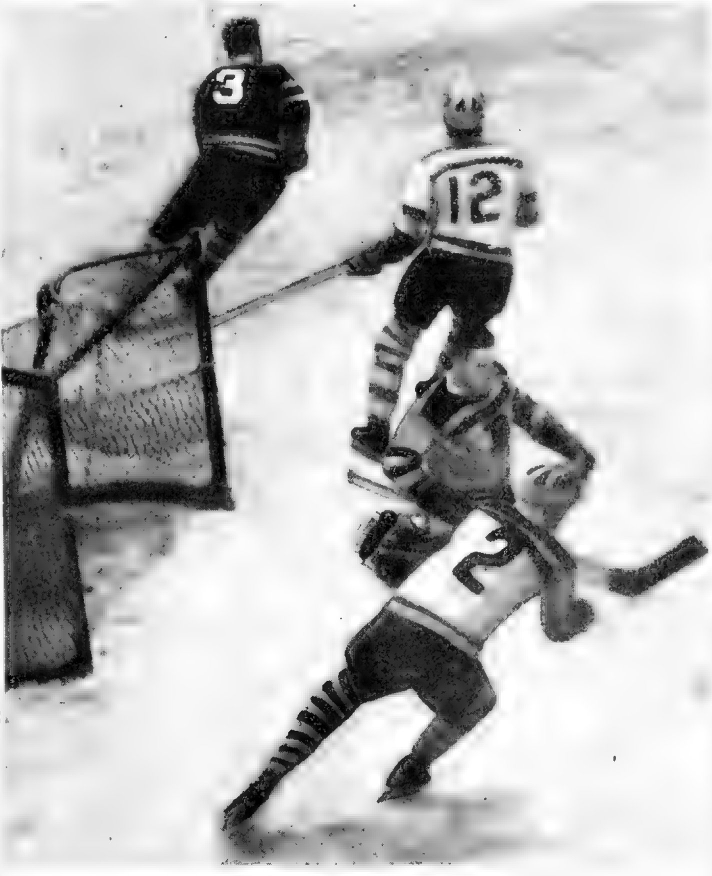
For the rest of the game the Bruins fought to get over the equalizer but the Toronto defense refused to crack. In the meantime the Leafs were bearing down to increase the lead.

Time and again they were in on Tiny Thompson but the Bruin goalie refused to yield, coming through with some of the most sensational saves of his entire career.

Jack Portland and Burr Williams relieved Eddie Shore and Babe Seibert and gave a fine account of themselves. Portland is a fine puck carrier and is tough to get by defensively.

Manager Frank Patrick believes that Max Kaminsky, who was acquired from the St. Louis Eagles, will snap the Bruins out of their scoring slump, for the ex-amateur is a great play maker as well as a fine scorer.

Flash Startles Bruin Defenders in Garden Conflict



"Flash" Hollett of the Maple Leafs gives the Bruin defenders a scare with a solo rush in the third period of the Garden clash. Hollett missed connections on this try but the Leafs won out, 1 to 0, over the Bruins. Charley Conacher scored the winning goal. The game drew the biggest house of the Bruin's home season. UNDERGRADS START MOVE TO ELEVATE LINE COACH

By Walter Riley

Speculation is rife today as to the successor of Eddie Casey as head coach of football at Harvard.

Possible nominees run the gamut of prominent coaches—mostly non-Harvard men—from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Andy Kerr, Colgate's magician; Lou Little of Columbia; Harry Kipke of Michigan; Navy Bill Ingram, recently resigned California [illegible]; Adam Walsh of Notre Dame, Santa Clara, Yale and now Crimson line coach, and Wesley Fesler, Ohio State All America and Crimson end coach—these are only some of the men most frequently mentioned.

Of them all the opinion prevails that Walsh has the inside track, [illegible] the favored son of Athletic Director Bill Bingham; that the stage was being set for the former captain and center of Knute Rockne's "Four Horsemen" team ever since the day the Crimson [illegible] him into Cambridge with the dust of New Haven streets still fresh on his linen.

Whatever the course of future events across the Charles, this much is certain: Eddie Casey is through as head coach.

The news which has been bandied about by word of mouth since Harvard's defeat at the hands of Yale at the Bowl and even long before was officially confirmed last night.

The Harvard Athletic Association formally announced Casey's resignation and its official acceptance by the committee on regulation of athletic sports of which Bingham is chairman.

STUDENTS WANT WALSH

In making the announcements, Harvard authorities only confirmed what the public already fully surmised.

No inkling of official nature of the new encumbent of his staff or of the 1936 schedule leaked out.

According to Bingham's statement further news will be forthcoming after the next meeting of the committee which convenes on January 7.

Undergraduate opinion is solidly behind the appointment of Walsh. Varsity players back him to the man.

The Harvard Crimson student publication took up the cudgels in his behalf in unprecedented fashion in an editorial this morning.

Speaking for the Crimson football squad it came out flatfootedly for the dynamic blond non-Harvard man making a radical departure from established custom in order that Harvard athletic officials might better understand the wishes and feelings of football players and students—the students and graduates who pay for the tickets and to those most intimately concerned the men who play the game of football for Harvard."

Inasmuch as the editorial claims to speak for 38 members of the football squad and the student body as well, it seems to be a foregone conclusion that the athletic committee will honor it with serious consideration.

CASEY IS LAUDED

Casey, a member of the official Harvard family for nine years, said:

"I have been head coach for four years. We have met with a fair amount of success, but on the other hand we have had a number of defeats. I cannot help but feel that a change will be for the better all around."

We quote from Bingham:

"Eddie Casey has been a coach at Harvard for nine years. We deeply appreciate the conscientious work he has done for Harvard football. His character, his fairness, his loyalty have endeared him to the players and to all others who have been associated with him at Cambridge."

Those closely associated with Harvard's inner circles are strongly convinced that some spot will be made for Casey at Cambridge where his talents may be better employed to advantage. And they are equally certain that Eddie will decide to remain in such a minor capacity.

RENDALL LEADS TUFTS ELEVEN

Announcement of Jack Rendall as captain of the 1935 football team at Tufts was the feature of the victory dinner at Cousens gymnasium. Rendall, who hails from Melrose, is a guard, and the only sophomore ever elected to captain a Tufts eleven.

Grid players, coaches, and staff were the honored guests at the dinner and each was introduced and applauded by the 1000 alumni and fans who attended.

Marblehead Coach Wants Night Game

Miami, Fla., Dec. 5—Coach Charlie McGuinness of the Marblehead High eleven planned to confer this afternoon with Edison athletic officials in an effort to have the Marblehead-Miami Edison High grid game this Saturday played under the floodlights instead of the afternoon.

The Massachusetts lads were sent through a practice session this morning.

'Dizzy' Signs, Makes Peace With Cards

'I'll Get $26,000 for Year,' Says Jerome H.

Bradenton, Fla., Dec. 5—Jerome "Dizzy" Dean, star pitcher for the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, said today his salary for next season would be between $20,000 and $26,000. He was paid $8500 last year.

By Associated Press

St. Louis, Dec. 5—Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, announced today that Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean, star right handed pitcher, had agreed to salary terms for 1935 and placed a signed contract in the mail.

The St. Louis National League declined to make public terms of the agreement. Dean has announced he would hold out for $25,000.

Breadon said Dean, now at Bradenton, Fla., informed him today of his acceptance of tendered terms.

Breadon returned last night from a ten-day visit to Florida, where he had several conferences with the pitcher, who last fall capped a highly successful season by winning two World Series games from the Detroit Tigers.

At the same time Breadon [illegible] the much [illegible] sale of the world [illegible] to Lew Wentz, Oklahoma [illegible] producer, have been called off.

The sale had been pending since Wentz went to St. Louis a month ago to interest himself in the purchase of the club.

Breadon said the deal had been off since last Thursday. He said he received one telegram from Wentz while in Florida but had [illegible]

"I set the price on the club and gave Mr. Wentz until last Thursday to accept it," Breadon explained. "When he did not get in touch with me I called off the deal. So far as I am concerned it is over. I intend to lay my plans for 1935."

Bill McKechnie Mails His Signed Contract

Babe Ruth may be with the Braves next season but he won't be the manager, officially.

Why? Well, Bill McKechnie let it be known today that he had mailed his signed 1935 contract to the Braves office, and Bill never flirts with the truth.

The Scot made this disclosure as he emanated from the primeval forests of Cameron County, Pennsylvania, gun in hand after a productive deer hunting expedition.

Neither Judge Fuchs, Braves president nor Edmund Cunningham could be reached for a statement this morning. It is still held that the Bambino will come to the Tepee in some capacity, perhaps as a utility outfielder and pinch hitter extraordinary.

It would hardly be cricket to expect the Babe to jump into a strange league and do well with a team which he knows practically nothing about and which is in the throes of reorganization.

The smart thing to do would have him study the situation from close range for a year, then jump into the driver's seat. That may materialize. Time will te

New Black Menace Arises in Person of Joe Louis, Golden Gloves Grad

By Damon Runyon

[illegible]

Joe Louis flattened eight opponents in a row around Chicago without [illegible] much comment [illegible] outer circles. Then the other night he belted out Charley Massera, a rough, young customer of [illegible] ability and persons who [illegible] up and to [illegible]

Joe Louis is a former Golden Gloves champion. He has been fighting [illegible] His opponents were the [illegible] Massera is the best he has fought.

Joe Louis is a counter fighter, a type not interesting to watch but he is a great puncher, and apparently a good successor to those who have held his new position of Black Menace in the past.

The trouble about being a Black Menace is there is no future to the position. The menace always remains a menace until he becomes a super-annuated and is retired, or exploded.

Harry Wills, "The Brown Panther of New Orleans," was our foremost Black Menace for many years. He was exploded by Jack Sharkey of Boston.

GODFREY SUCCEEDS WILLS

Wills is now a peaceful resident of Harlem. He held the position of Black Menace about as long as any man. What a Black Menace menaces is the white man's heavyweight championship. Wills professionally menaced Jack Dempsey for upwards of a decade.

He was succeeded by George Godfrey, the Black Shadow of Leiperville.

Godfrey['s] original office was as a Black Menace to a Black Menace. He menaced old Harry Wills, the Black Menace himself.

Jack Kearns bought Godfrey's contract from John Arthur Johnson, former heavyweight champion, and turned Godfrey over to Jim Dougherty of Leiperville, Pa., to develop as a menace to the Black Menace also as a black buffer to Dempsey.

In the first capacity Godfrey succeeded very well. Wills always refused to meet him. Then Jack Sharkey licked Godfrey and followed this up by beating Wills, thus disposing of a brace of Black Menaces for the time being.

Godfrey rehabilitated himself after a time, but Gene Tunney had become champion, and disregarded menaces, both black and white.

Oddly enough before he became champion, Tunney was quite willing to fight Wills, then at the peak of his Black Menace career. Wills declined or at least his manager did.

The original Black Menace was a fellow named Tom Molyneaux, a Virginia Negro, many years ago. He menaced Tom Cribb champion of England, which amounted to being champion of the world at the time. Molyneaux made quite a thing out of his menacing until Cribb whipped him twice.

ORIGINAL BLACK MENACE

Then, when the mighty John L. Sullivan was heavyweight champion of the world, along came Peter Jackson, a statuesque Negro who became the most famous Black Menace. He menaced Sullivan for years.

Finally Jimmy Wakely, one of Sullivan's backers drew the color line on Jackson.

Sullivan got the discredit for the matter, but Wakely, telling the writer the story in later years said Sullivan always wanted to fight the Negro. His backers did not think he could win.

Hence the color line.

Jackson the old timers say was the greatest Negro fighter that ever lived, a statement not entirely substantiated by his record as compared to the records of other Negroes.

Many veterans think Sam Langford, the Boston Tar Baby, was the greatest.

When James J. Jeffries was champion John Arthur Johnson rose to the office of Black Menace though Sam Langford was around at the time. Sam never seemed to aspire to the exalted position. He was content to go along just being the [illegible] heavyweight.

HAS FIELD TO HIMSELF

Jeffries retired. Johnson beat Tommy Burns, who acquired claim to the title then Jeffries "came back" to a sound thumping at the hands of Johnson, first Negro heavyweight champion.

John Arthur's acquirement of the title created such a rumpus that Johnson himself seemed somewhat relieved when he lost the championship to Jess Willard in Havana. He remarked then that he was glad his worries were over.

Wills, not as good a fighter as Johnson, or Langford either, was none the less the best candidate for Black Menace that we had when menacing got good again.

Godfrey is the last black heavyweight of any prominence, and his fighting ability has long since petered out. He is around Paris doing a little wrestling. A stout American Negro named Obadiah Walker is the heavyweight sensation over there.

Joe Louis thus has the Black Menace field in this country to himself. He may never get a fight for the title, but if he takes Harry Wills as his example, he can get rich just being a Black Menace.

Kostka Gets Mat, Baseball and Football Bids

By Universal Service

M[inne]apolis, Minn., Dec. 5—Stan[ley] [Kostka], Minnesota's hard driving [illegible] fullback, is swamped [with] offers for professional ap[pearances] as a wrestler, and for [football] and baseball, it became [known] [illegible] campus coaches [illegible] the effects of a Big Ten [illegible] rule, which next season [will] make ineligible five and possibly six players of the championship team.

Under the rule players apparently ineligible for further Conference competition are Kostka, Bill Bevan, guard; Art Clarkson, Jay Bevan and George Svendsen, and possibly Vernon Oech.

The players are said to have played on freshman teams in collegiate competition. Under the rule this gives them three years of collegiate competition and they are no longer eligible for football with teams operating under the same rule.

Campus authorities and athletic officials at the university are non-committal, claiming they do not want to initiate the question before the Western Conference meeting of officials and athletic directors at Chicago this coming week-end.

Oech is reported to have played a year of football at the University of Montana and one at Minnesota, as well as having participated in a freshman game. If the first year game is interpreted as a season under the rule he will be declared ineligible.

Kostka, Clarkson, Bill Bevan, Svendsen and Jay Bevan all are reported to have played freshman football at Oregon and Oregon State and to have completed their eligibility years with Minnesota.

Kostka's future was the subject of campus gossip when it was reported that Dick Hanley, coach at Northwestern, had invited him to play in the All-Star East-West game, while another report said the Chicago Bears, world champion pro-football team, and the White Sox baseball team sought Kostka.

OFFICIAL ALL-SCHOLASTIC ELEVEN ANNOUNCED SATURDAY

Fred Ostergren

Saturday is the red letter day in schoolboy athletics, for on that day the nearest thing to an official All-Star Scholastic football team will be announced exclusively in the columns of the Boston American.

It is an announcement that is awaited with keen interest not only by the thousands of schoolboys interested in the game in and around Boston but by an equally large group of those who follow schoolboy play with avid interest.

The Boston American Board of Schoolboy Football Coaches, comprised of six of the outstanding mentors in this area, will have their all-star team selected by that date, and an all star team it will be.

Any player who can pass the critical judgment of such critical judges as Skip Sherlock of Hyde Park, Bill Broderick of Salem, Jim Mansfield of Haverhill, Charley Dickerman of Somerville, Fred Ostergren [illegible] and Bill Ohrensberger of Boston English, who [illegible] a star of first magnitude.

GLOUCESTER IN STIFFEST TEST AT SALEM

By Bill Connell

Gloucester's fighting Fishermen step into their stiffest test of the year on Saturday afternoon at Bertram field in Salem against the Witches in the sole post season school football game of the year.

Nate Ross, Gloucester boy who starred with Bucknell's gridmen, returned to his home town to coach the team into football top standing in two years. This is his second year at Gloucester as head coach, yet his team won seven and lost only two against strong opposition.

He's made Gloucester football-minded. The fever started to grow this year when the team upset powerful Lynn Classical, beat Swampscott, lost to Marblehead 21-20 in the most colorful game of the year, beat Dedham, New Bedford Vocational and Amesbury in order, [illegible] Beverly, then edged Saugus and Stoneham to close the regular campaign.

Left Halfback Teddy Williams has been Ross' outstanding product. Ted weighs 165, stands 5-10, is not quite 17 years old, scored 111 points this year. How to stop him will be Salem's headache. Others tried it and didn't succeed.

MAHAN IN THE BUD

Beverly paid him the extreme compliment of [illegible] three and four men to cover him on every play and so did manage to halt his scoring dashes, although he broke loose several times.

Every foe was shooting at him through the season, the usual fate of a star back and he took considerable punishment. But never faltered and with a rest since Thanksgiving can make the day miserable for Salem.

A fine straightarm, ability to spin on a dime and cutback at acute angles with amazing speed are the assets which have earned Williams the rating as the state's best running back.

Two of his backfield mates are ace blockers, Quarterback Don McQuarrie, 135, and Fullback Teoff Roland, 153. Roland also is a line bucker. Williams passes, and the two right half backs, Al Martin and George Lemos, can block and carry. Both the latter weigh 135, so you see there's little backfield weight.

SALEM AT FULL STRENGTH

Subs likely to see service Saturday include Charley Lycett, quarterback; John King, Francis "Lefty" Munroe and Joe McNeil, halfbacks; Ernest Medico, guard, Dolor Martin, end.

Salem will be at full strength, with Bill Bates and Marty Donovan, ends; Stan Wydra and Al Nazaroff, tackles; Roger Hallee and Tony Tassanari, guards, and Roger Jalbert, center. John Fay pilots halfbacks Johnny Rubin, Sam Colin and Stan Eusko in the backfield.

The Witches have a weight edge, but Gloucester downed Classical's even heavier team and so isn't worried a bit. With Ted Williams carrying the ball, game is likely to be broken wide open any minute.

With good weather the game figures to furnish a fine show of offensive football, and probably will sell out Bertram Field's 8000-odd parking spots.

The other post season games apparently have flown out the window. Waltham didn't want to play an extra event, nor did Everett wish to meet Malden. Haverhill had its suits at the laundry and gear packed away, and no game with Salem could be arranged.

New Britain wasn't interested in meeting Malden. It wanted to play Arlington, but discovered the limited capacity at the latter's field and couldn't get Fenway Park for a game. Thus evaporated chances for Chick Shea to bring his fine New Britain team to show Greater Boston. He'll try to slate a regular game next season.

Student Council Abolition Sought

Abolition of the Student Athletic Council at Boston University was urged by the News, student publication, in an editorial published in this week's issue.

In place of the council the News recommends that President Marsh appoint each year a student well acquainted with University activities, this appointee to attend the meetings of the Faculty Athletic Council for the purpose of expressing student opinion at the meetings.

Down the Years With Eddie Casey

IN ACTION—Eddie Casey, one of the outstanding Harvard halfbacks, makes a tackle which revolutionized that art. Indianizing it was called. Jim Fitzpatrick of B. C. was Eddie's victim.

TAMING THE BULLDOG—Is the caption of this picture and shows Eddie, a grown up brindle and a Harvard admirer in that order. It was after a Yale defeat in which Casey played a stellar part.

NAMED COACH—Four years ago the call came to Casey, and he responded to take over Harvard coaching reins. Here he is shown with Arnold Horween, the man he succeeded as grid leader.

GREATEST PUPILS—Casey is shown with Barry Wood and Ben Ticknor, two of the greatest players of his regime. Both captained Harvard elevens, and both were All-America. Casey was hailed as a wonder man when he had these boys performing for him. In Eddie's first year at the helm, 1931, Harvard won its first seven games but missed an undefeated season when Albie Booth's field goal beat the Crimson

"Al Schact has not been signed yet, but I have no doubt Joe will take him on for third base duty. I'm positive, too, that I could name the new first base [illegible] I might be wrong and, anyway, I'd rather have the first word come from the manager.

"All our [illegible] coaches will remain in the organization. I have already stated that Jack Onslow would manage one of our minor league clubs. Rumor has had "Bill" Lalk going to Washington but he will go back scouting for us through Texas and the Southwest.

"Tommy Daly is valuable conducting the morning school for young players at the Fens, and I hope eventually to get a minor league club for him to pilot."

A flock of pitchers had perfect fielding marks. Schoolboy Rowe won first honors while "Dusty" Rhodes, Johnny Welch, Henry Johnson, Herb Pennock and Joe Mulligan all finished with 1000.

New York, Dec. 5—Babe Ruth's $35,000 salary for the 1934 season is just a small matter for Colonel Jake Ruppert. At least that's the way it seems.

The coal shares have been limping along in a manner decidedly at variance with their behavior at this season in past years. The answer is seen in the mild weather. But there are other factors worth considering. Principal among these is the likelihood of a freight rate increase. If this eventuates there is a strong possibility that it will be passed along to the consumer. The obvious effect over the near term is to stimulate shipments. This is particularly true of bituminous. Anthracite may not be so easily moved to market now by such an influence but is worth considering as a factor which would start issues in that group upward with a turn in the weather.

The outlook for the motor industry is more optimistic than some observers had expected. From B. H. Dealers in some cases are ordering cars they have not yet seen and there have been scattered announcements of sales now with deliveries promised for after the motor shows. No actual figures have been compiled but it appears that sales at this season are unusually large.

From a broad point of view the market is going along in just the fashion expected. The rails have lifted to the fore and kept faith by making the critical 38 level on the hourly release. To us it is a source of gratification that the market is behaving as it is. We frankly staked our bull hopes on the rails and ignored an independent upmove in the industrials. Traders who stayed out now realize that opportunity is never really lost. All that the industrials did the rails are now doing and nothing has been lost.

SHARES HIGHER AT CLOSE OF DEALINGS

New York, Dec. 5—A steady demand for stocks pushed the list into new high ground for the recovery today. Trading picked up sharply on the advance with turnover well over the million share mark.

With the exception of the oil and food shares the market surged forward as a unit. Railroad shares were particular favorites with Atchison and Union Pacific setting the pace with gains of more than a point each. Southern Pacific, Lackawanna, Delaware & Hudson and others scored lesser gains. Radio Common and preferreds were unusually active on reports of a plan to pay up back dividends.

FAVORABLE NEWS

Further favorable business news in the form of increases in steel operations and higher electric power output stimulated traders for the advance to fresh activity.

United States Steel, Bethlehem, American Can and other industrial shares were taken in volume during the day and many of them reached new highs for the movement.

General Motors, Chrysler, Nash and other motor shares were in fair demand and scored moderate gains.

National Distillers set the pace for the liquor shares by rising more than a point after opening on a block of 6000 shares. Schenley and other whiskey shares scored moderate gains.

Utilities were strong under the leadership of Consolidated Gas. Oils and food shares marked time, while specialties, aviation and farm shares worked higher.

RAILS CONFIRM

The improvement in railroad securities had a stimulating effect upon the general market, although definite news developments of a character to account for the uptrend in these securities were lacking.

Chart theorists, however, had been worried over the failure of the rail stocks to "confirm" the recent advance in industrials by joining the movement, so when the rails finally did turn upward many chart readers accepted it as a bullish sign for the market as a whole. Others, however, thought the movement in the rails had not yet gone far enough to be convincing.

In the meantime, lacking anything definite in the way of news regarding the carriers, Wall Street was busy with rumors of new plans in Washington to put the transportation system on its feet. These rumors seemed to be based largely on conjecture, although it was pointed out that a prosperous railroad system would mean heavier consumption of important materials such as steel and lumber and could play an important part in recovery.

The anniversary of repeal was celebrated by considerable buying of alcohol shares. Non-ferrous metals also pushed up substantially, evidently reflecting fresh inflation hopes in some speculative quarters. These hopes, however, were based chiefly on the plans for a huge government spending program, rather than expectation of further devaluation of the dollar.

Mother Faints Over Walter's Wedding

CHAPTER XVII

The afternoon waned. They shopped briefly before dinner for a lovely-fitted bag. "From the groom to his bride," Walter said. "As soon as we have time I'll get you everything else." They just had time to get Walter a pair of pajamas and a toothbrush before the stores closed. They lingered over their dinner. Both knew and dreaded what was coming.

"We'll go up about eight," Walter said hollowly. Helen noded.

"You mustn't be frightened or nervous. There's bound to be a fuss. They'd make a fuss if I married the daughte of a banker."

"But not as much fuss as there'll be that you married a manicurist," Helen amended in a small voice.

"Nonsense," Walter said almost roughly. "They were all manicurists themselves. What's the matter with manicuring?" He glared at her. She knew he was looking past her, formulating arguments to be used later. "Our money's been made by manicuring. Of course, I owe my sisters an enormous debt, one that I can never really repay, but I choose my own wife! They're really wonderful girls underneath. Irene, especially but they're all wonderful. Loyal, clever, ambitious. They'll surely love you. Promise me you'll get along with them, darling. After all, they're my sisters. They're your family, too, now. You'll be your sweet self, won't you, dear, and, if necessary, make little compromises?"

TELL ALL AT ONCE

"I'll try, dear. I want to love them because I love you."

"I knew you would. There'll be a fuss at first but they'll get over it." He was becoming more cheerful.

Helen arranged bread crumbs in neta rows.

"We'd better be starting, dear. Oh, damnation!" he remembered suddenly.

"What's the matter, dear?"

"I'l forgotten. This is Wednesday. All he girls and their husbands always have dinner with mama on Wednesday."

Helen paled. "Can't we wait and tell them tomorrow?" she faltered.

"No, it's just as well this way Its a lucky thing for us at that. We'll tell 'em all at one time and get it over with."

"Don't you worry, honey," he soothed her, "you're my wife now. The Rileys always stick together through thick and thin. As I say, be prepared for a little fuss at the beginning but the rest will be clear sailing. Clear sailing!"

* * *

Helen's first impression was grandeur, heavy Spanish furniture, red tapestries, fringe, enormous tapestries on iron rods on the wall, but as they stood on the threshold to the Riley living room, there seemed to be a great crowd there, all staring at her.

MAMA IN FAINT

"Mama, girls, everybody, I want you to meet my wife."

She clung to his arm. She tried to smile. The silence was dreadful and then it burst as suddenly as does a toy balloon when a match touches it. There was an excited babble of voices.

"Walter!" Irene shrieked, "you must be mad! That's Helen Schiller, one of our help!"

"My Lord!" cried another.

A shriek from Agnes. "Careful. Mama. Catch her, Jerry. My Lord . . . she's fainted!"

Walter was at his mother's side chafing her cold hands.

"Mama, mama," he implored. He turned savagely to Eddie, who was standing around with a grin on his face. "In my room, in my desk is a flask of whiskey. Quick, get it. Middle drawer," Walter barked. Eddie scurried off.

"You . . . you idiot," Irene raged, her eyes flashing. "How dare you burst in on mama like that with a wife."

Walter didn't answer. "Dirk, Jerry, help me get her into bed."

He lifted his mother. Dirk supported her shoulders and Jerry fumbled about her feet. They carried her into the bedroom, the girls, save Stella, following.

Helen stood uncertainly by Anastasia's chair. She was trembling so violently that she could scarcely stand.

"So that's why you didn't come in this morning," Stella snapped rudely. "You've got a nerve to marry my brother. Pretty smart, aren't you, to vamp him right under my nose."

Helen paled. "We love each other," she said simply.

"DON'T TREMBLE SO"

Stella choked with rage. Helen had a momentary fear that Stella would slap her. Her heart missed a beat. But Stella turned abruptly on her heel and walked out to join the others in the bedroom, from whence came the sound of angry voices.

She was alone in the big room. Helen had an impulse to run away when the tall, kindly man with tortoise shell glasses came in.

"She'll come to in a minute," he reassured her gently. "I'm Dirk Terhune, Irene's husband. That makes me your brother-in-law. Let me offer you my sincere good wishes. I hope the rest will do the same when they regain their composure and their manners. Don't tremble so, child."

"Thank you," she whispered huskily. "I'm Helen Schiller. I mean Helen Riley now. We were married this morning." She looked at him piteously. "Is . . . is his mother all right?"

"Certainly! The shock, that's all. Some people faint with joy!" he grinned briefly. "Here they come now. Buck up! They'll get over it."

They burst into the room like a cavalcade, Irene in the lead, followed by Walter, who was red and harrowed-looking.

"How could you!" stormed Irene. "After all our plans for you, our ambitions! A manicurist! One of the shop girls!"

WALTER IS ANGRY

"You might have killed mama," Agnes cried loudly.

Walter came to Helen's side. He took her hand. "Shut up, all of you. Nothing's wrong with mama. It's just the shock. I'm sorry I didn't break it to her more gently, that's all."

Stella laughed shortly. "She's been with us three years, and I never realized what she was up to. The little sneak!"

"You shut up, Stella, or I'll slap your face. Don't you dare tak that way about my wife," Walter blazed.

Irene turned viciously on Stella. "Haven't you any sense, you darn fool? He's married. That's all there is to it. We'll have to make the best of her."

Helen swallowed her tears. If Walter hadn't held her, she really would have turned and fled.

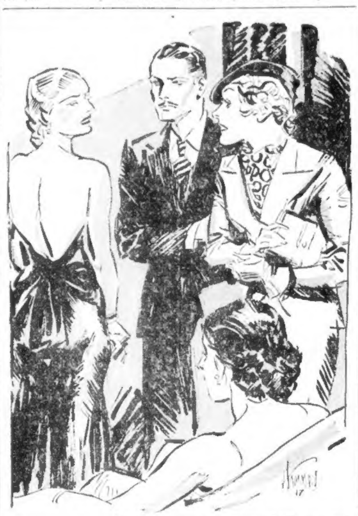
Read in the next instalment how Walter attempts to reconcile his wife and sister.



"So that's why you didn't come in this morning," Stella snapped rudely.

G. O. P. Lacks Even Promises

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Senator Couzens offers some suggestions to the Republicans who are attempting to sell a bill of goods without showing samples.

He says that's why they lost out last election. You cannot criticise a program unless you have a substitute. Don't say the meal is bad unless you can pull a sandwich out of your pocket.

The fight in the G. O. P. resembles a defeated pugilist punching himself in the nose. The party is due for a house cleaning but everybody wants to be the vacuum cleaner and nobody wants to be the dust.

In the meantime there is no organization, no platform and no working schedule. A political party is in a bad way when it cannot even think of something to promise.

Youth Held After Death Ends Fight

Marino Chiappini, 18, of Alley street, Lynn, was held for the grand jury by Judge Ralph W. Reeve in Lynn district court today on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of John F. Barry, 53, 34 Prospect street, Lynn, with whom he is declared to have fought.

Found unconscious on Summer street, Lynn, early Sunday, Barry died some hours later in Lynn Hospital. His death, according to the testimony of Dr. Lawrence F. Cusick, assistant medical examiner, was caused by the presence of blood in the lungs.

3-Day Suspension for Chief's Driver

Inner workings of the Wakefield police department furnished another surprising turn today when it was stated that Patrolman Gervais Stanley, arrested for driving his chief without a license, had been suspended by the chief for three days without pay.

At the office of Court Clerk Wilfred B. Tyler of Malden court, application for a summons against Stanley was sought by Sergeant George B. De Roche. The chief told Clerk Tyler of the suspension. He said it cost Stanley about $18 and that he, the chief, thought that was punishment enough.

5 HURT, DRIVER HELD IN CRASH

Peabody, Dec. 5—The names of three men were on the danger list in the J. B. Thomas Hospital today, two others also were injured seriously, and a sixth man was under arrest as the result of a crash on the Newburyport turnpike this morning.

On the danger list are Frederick Silva, 26, of Walsh avenue, with a fractured skull, concussion of the brain and other injuries; Joseph P. Mello, 39, married, of Harris street, concussion, internal injuries and fractures, and Kenneth Miobray, 23, Proctor street, internal injuries and fractures.

Slightly less serious was the injuries of Joseph Mahoney, 23, of Highland avenue, and Delmar Ellis, 26, of Proctor street.

Police arrested John H. LeBlanc, 28, of Proctor street, an hour after the accident, charging that it was his car that crashed into a pole. They accused him of being under the influence of liquor.

BIG FIRMS JOIN NEW GOLD RUSH

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 5 — Mojave, sleepy little desert town, has become the scene of California's latest gold rush, but unlike the rich strikes of an earlier day, the scramble for its wealth is between titians of the mining world.

Rich strikes in the Silver Queen Mine on Soledad Mountain, seven miles from Mojave, have revived interest in the gold workings of the area, until, during the past month, virtualy every large mining company in the country has sent representatives to the district.

Gold fields of South Africa, international mining operators, were said to have acquired an option on the Silver Queen for a reported $3,500,000 from George Holmes, former Southern California University student, and associates who discovered the rich mine a year ago. Rich Americans are hunting options.

Penniless Woman Asks Old Oil Lamps to Light Home

A poverty-stricken wife and mother writes the Boston Evening American Swap Editor that she is forced to wear an old bathing suit because she cannot afford to buy underwear. She says anything over size 36 will fit her.

She cannot afford to light her home with electricity, so she asks for kerosene lamps. Surely some readers may have kerosene lamps no longer in use.

The same mother says her son needs, shoes size 8, trousers, size 32. He now is wearing overalls to school.

A request for woman's clothing, size 54, has been received.

"I cannot get a job because I look so ragged. My appearance is against me," explains a man.

This man asks for a suit size 40, and shoes, size 8.

WOMAN NEEDS CARE

One woman cannot even take advantage of the free treatment offered at the City Hospital for her particular illness, because she hasn't a dress or coat suitable for street wear. She wears size 48.

She has sons aged 16, 13 and 10 who need blouses and trousers. She also requests dresses for girls 11 and 8.

A Roxbury resident asks for woman's clothes size 44.

A mother of seven children ranging from 3 to 17 years old asks for girls' stockings size 6, 7, 8½, 9 and 9½ and stockings for boys size 4 and 8½.

The same party wishes a winter coat size 44 and woman's shoes size 5½ and a little girl's coat size 10 and dresses.

BOY WITH ILL HEART

One letter asks for furniture of any kind but particularly beds. The woman has three rooms without furniture.

We have a request for clothes for girls 12, 14, 16 and for size 46 for a woman.

The worried mother of a small son suffering from heart trouble asks for an overcoat for him size 10. She also has an infant who hasn't even the comfort of a carriage.

RABBI LAZARON IN FESTIVAL

The sixth annual Chanukah festival, outstanding holiday celebration of Greater Boston Jews, will be held tonight at 8 in the Temple Kehillath Israel, Harvard street, Brookline, under the auspices of the United Jewish Brotherhoods.

Rabbi Morris S. Lazaron, nationally known, will speak on "Jewish Dreams and Realities," and Cantor Albert Rappaport, of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, will be heard in sacred music.

Stressing his desire that as many as possible Jews attend, Gabriel M. Stern, president of the United Jewish Brotherhoods, said:

"For this reason it was decided that this year's function would take the form of a mass celebration, with the price of admission so nominal that every family may be attracted."

Youth Burned by Paint Fluid Dies

Arthur Larson, 18, of Savin Hill avenue, Dorchester, died in City Hospital from burns he received Monday when a can of paint remover with which he was working exploded and covered him with blazing fluid.

Lindy Plea by Hoover Bared

Washington, Dec. 5—A hitherto unrevealed story of an appeal by former President Hoover for the return of the Lindbergh baby, written but never delivered, was related by Theodore G. Joslin, who was Presidential secretary at the time.

In a just published book, "Hoover Off The Record," Joslin said he received word that Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh would appreciate the President's making such an appeal. Hoover agreed and wrote it.

Before its delivery, however, he said, word came from Colonel Lindbergh that an important development was expected momentarily and that it would be best under the circumstances if the President did not make it.

The Hoover appeal was to have been nationally broadcast.

Woman Runs for Aid as Home Burns

The five-room home of 64-year-old Mrs. Lila McFheters, a quarter of a mile back from King Philip avenue in South Weymouth, burned to the ground today while she ran half a mile in her night gown to spread the alarm.

The fire began when an oil stove flared up as she tried to light the burner. Her hands badly burned, Mrs. McFheters ran to the home of her nearest neighbors—half a mile away in Forest avenue.

By the time the fire department reached the scene the house was lost.

1000 Chinese Reds Slain

London, Dec. 5 (INS)—One thousand communists were killed and one thousand wounded in a battle along the Siang River, according to a dispatch from Shanghai to the London Times today.

Klieg lights! Famous people! Thunderous applause!

These are just a few of the many highlights which accompany a Hollywood prevue of such a fine picture as Universal Pictures' "Imitation of Life," which has its first Boston showing at the famous RKO Keith Memorial Theater, tomorrow night. We urge you to see this soul stirring story of Fannie Hurst's, which is a worthy successor to "Back Street."

In today's "About Faces" drawings by Art. Moger, you Boston Evening American readers will be entertained by the leading stars in "Imitation of Life," as they will appear at the RKO Memorial theater on Thursday night. After you have seen this poignant drama, fill in the names of each Hollywood favorite in the squares beneeath their drawings.

These squares equal the number of letters in their names. Use the letter "E" as a clue and your solutions should be forthcoming. Mail your entire week's solutions to: The About Faces Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass. Those who are successful in identifying all the stars will share in the $25 in weekly cash awards as given by the Boston Evening American.

Who can't use a share of these cash awards for Christmas? Enter this fascinating Hollywood series, NOW!

The prizes are: First prize, $5.00 in cash; second prize, $3.00; third prie, $2.00; and fifteen prizes of a brand new one dollar bill, each!

Hop on the "About Faces" bandwagon!

PUBLIC AIDING NEEDY, IS VIEW

The people of America are not sitting back waiting for the government to support their needy neighbors, declared Dr. George E. Vincent, of New York, who has participated in 12 community campaigns for welfare funds this fall.

Dr. Vincent, vice-chairman for the 1934 Mobilization for Human Needs, and president emeritus of the Rockefeller Foundation, is one of eight speakers listed for the inaugural dinner of the Emergency Campaign for 1935 at the Hotel Statler tomorrow night.

Others who will speak are Dr. George H. Bigelow, director of the Massachusetts General Hospital; Margaret Culkin Banning, novelist, and Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy.

Nearly 1000 persons are expected to attend the dinner, which will start the campaign for $4,000,000 to support 97 Boston private charities.

Bishop's Roadster Attached by Bank

George W. Bishops roadster, and his various bank accounts in Lynn, Boston and Peabody, have been attached by the Lynn Cooperative Bank, pending settlement of a suit against him by that company for $25,000.

The suit is an outgrowth of the charges placed against Mrs. Ada Pauline Crabtree, Lynn divorcee, and Bishop, so-called Lynn "man-about-town," in connection with alleged thefts from the institution.

Beaten Officer's Club, Pistol Found

The service revolver and club, taken from Patrolman John E. Striplin of the Jamaica Plain station when he was set upon in a Hyde Park avenue cafe, were found today by Police Sergeant Adian F. Edwards underneath a telephone booth in the place.

However, the only clue to the six assailants of the patrolman still is the blood-stained gray jacket left behind by one of the youths. Striplin is in Forest Hills Hospital, where he is being treated for a fractured skull.

Noakes Relatives Beg for Funeral

Altoona, Pa., Dec. 5—Relatives of Elmo J. Noakes today wired Altoona asking if the man's body might be buried beside those of his three children who were found on a wooded mountainside.

H. M. Leibegott, funeral director, wired back that the man could be buried beside his children if the relatives paid the expenses. Otherwise he and Winifred Pierce will be buried in paupers graves today or Thursday.

Typhoon Wrecks Town

Manila, P. I., Dec. 5 (AP)—Three Filipinos were reported killed and virtually the entire town of Bacuit blown down today by the eighth of a series of typhoons that have swept the Philippines in recent weeks.

Harvard's Literary Papers to Merge

Ending a long and bitter rivalry, Harvard's two publications, specializing in literary criticism, the Advocate and the Critic, have agreed to merge, under the banner of the Advocate.

The Critic's editorial board will be retained by the new Advocate, and the material gathered by the Critic will be used in the December issue of the combined publication.

Inmate-Candidate Is Granted Parole

Friends were successful today in getting a parole for Arthur St. John of Quincy Point who ran for the legislature while he was in Dedham jail serving a sentence for neglect of his wife and five children.

St. John lost out in the primaries, and his wife conducted a "sticker" campaign for him in the election, but again he lost.

ANGRY RUSSIA ASKS DETAILS

By Associated Press

Leningrad, Dec. 5 — Impatience and anger are gaining among Leningrad's citizens as, left in the dark after four days of investigation, they demand to know whether the assassin of Sergei Kiroff had accomplices.

The removal of F. D. Medved, chief of the Leningrad province commissariat of home affairs, in charge of security, together with six of his principal aides, and the enactment of new laws for speedy trial and execution of terrorists, have only intensified the public demand for more information about the crime. Leonid Nicolieff is held as the killer.

The arrest in Leningrad and Moscow areas of 71 "white guards" or reactionaries, has led to a general belief that some of them, at least are suspected of connection with the assassination.

Since the new law provides that all terroristic investigations must be completed within ten days, announcement of the fate of Nicolieff and possible associates cannot be delayed long. The opinion is growing that light will be thrown on the background of the crime after Kiroff's funeral in Red Square, Moscow, tomorrow afternoon.

2 Million to Pass by Kiroff Body

By Associated Press

Moscow, Dec. 5—Soviet Russia's masses bade farewell today to the assasinated Sergei Kiroff, while their leaders moved relentlessly to avenge him.

A national funeral tomorrow will be Communisms's tribute to Kirofff, and his ashes will be placed in the Kremlin wall, near those of Nicolai Lenin, the Soviet's hero of heroes.

Hundreds of thousands of workers stood in line in the snow to pass Kiroff's bier in the Union House—it was estimated 2,000,000 would file by during the 40 hours before cremation.

NEEDIEST FIRST ON ERA LISTS

Single women and single men are at the bottom of the ERA list of needy cases eligible for help, according to an announcement by State Administrator Arthur G. Rotch.

He said that he expected 100,000 men and women to be on the ERA payrolls in Massachusetts by the first of the year, but that people would be cared for in the order of financial distress and the number of their dependents.

Rotch said further that an agreement made by Former Administrator Joseph P. Carner with the Federal administrator in Washington, stipulated that ERA money in this state would be used only for payrolls and the purchase of materials for workshops.

Dance at Chelsea Tonight Will Help Sick Folk

The second annual floor show and dance given by the members of the Chelsea Junior Tuberculosis Sanitarium will be held tonight in the Temple Beth El vestry on Crescent avenue, Chelsea, with Miss Lillian Stein as chairman of the entertainment committee.

Assisting are Julia Lazurus, Sylvia Levine and Beatrice Hill. Bette Brooks, radio singer, will headline the entertainment. Miss Sadye Hill is president of the organization.

* * *

Many Central Council officials will attend the grand annual reunion and ball to be given by the County Donegal Association tomorrow night in Hibernian hall, Roxbury. Michael O'Donnell is chairman of the general committee.

There will be both modern and Gaelic music for dancing. The grand march will start at 10 o'clock.

* * *

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Musicians Mutual Relief Society will conduct a bridge, whist and dancing party tonight in Convention hall, proceeds to be donated to the relief fund. The committee includes Mrs. Anna A. Fein, Mrs. Mary Nichols and Miss Margaret Keveney.

* * *

A beano party in aid of SS. Peter and Paul's parish will be held next Monday night in the school hall, Broadway, South Boston, with Miss Helena Dwyer as chairman.

A Chanukah party and installation of officers will be conducted tonight by members of the Young Israel of Mattapan organization, with Maurice Schneider as master-of-ceremonies.

* * *

Beginning tonight, George Dilboy Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, of Somerville, will hold a series of Wednesday evening beano parties at the Post headquarters on Curtis street. Edward Mullaney has been appointed chairman. Proceeds will be used for relief work.

* * *

The operetta "Shulamith" will be presented at the next meeting of the Boston Council of Young Judea to be held tomorrow evening at the Menorah Institute, Elm Hill avenue, Roxbury.

* * *

A Christmas Fund whist, bridge and dance will be held at Norfolk House Center, Roxbury, next Monday night in aid of holiday festivities to be provided for 1500 children connected with this community house.

Organizations and civic clubs assisting in the affair include the DeNormandie Club, Norfolk Young Men's Association, the Norfolk House Mothers' Club, Women's Group, the Eliot Club and the Girls' Foundation.

Is This Too Good for Your Cough?

Creomulsion may be a better help than you need. It combines seven helps in one. It is made for quick relief, for safety.

Mild coughs often yield to lesser helps. No one can tell. No one knows which factor will do most for any certain cough. So careful people, more and more, are using Creomulsion for any cough that starts.

The cost is a little more than a single help. But your druggist is authorized to guarantee it, so it costs nothing if it fails to bring you quick relief. Coughs are danger signals. For safety's sake, deal with them in the best way known.

STOP BAD BREATH

Thousands of people afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels, stimulating them to natural action, and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

Olive Tablets bring no griping pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after 20 years of practice among patients afflicted with constipation with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two at bedtime for a week and note the effect. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Celebration for Boston Points to Need of Defense in the Air

ON December 17, 1903, the Wright brothers made the world's first air flight from Kitty Hawk, N. C.

The 31st anniversary will be formally observed this year in Boston.

An effort is to be made to have seventy planes circling Boston at 10:30, the hour at which the Wright brothers' plane left the ground.

The Aero Club of Boston is leading in arranging further observance of the anniversary of the date when man first won a place among the birds of the air.

Until the airplane came along, the American Eagle was only a mighty symbol.

Now we have human eagles of the cloud spaces. We need a lot more of them.

MAN'S FIRST FLIGHT ON WINGS—THE WRIGHT BROTHERS TAKE TO THE AIR!

We must have them if we are to resist successfully the invasion which threatens us at some perhaps not distant day.

The air flights this year have demonstrated beyond doubt that the Atlantic and Pacific oceans are no longer the barriers they once were.

We led the world in the Wright brothers' day. We lead the world in commercial airplane development today.

The coming anniversary should be an inspiration for all patriots to fight for a military air force sufficient to "repel all boarders" on United States soil.

True Brotherly Love

Jim and Bill Stick Together

"Affliction's sons are brothers in distress:
A brother to relieve—how exquisite the bliss!"

Maybe Bill and Jim Morgan of Bridgeport would wonder what the above passage from "A Winter Night" meant.

Yet these two brothers, sons of a stricken war veteran who is in a government hospital, illustrated even better than words the meaning.

They were to be separated. Rather than face that they ran away. In order to remain together. For they were "pals." Sharing life with one another. Indeed, how "exquisite their bliss."

But Jim is not going to an orphanage. His grandmother is to see they are not separated. Together, each a brother in distress will relieve.

To you, Jim and Bill, the best of luck, Pals.

An Inglorious Record

How Autoists Can Do Better

From Morgan T. Ryan, Massachusetts Registrar of Motor Vehicles, comes news of a most distressing sort. It is word that 1934 witnessed the setting of a new high record for highway fatalities.

The last week of the State fiscal year brought 21 deaths and lifted the total for 1934 to 902. An increase of more than 18 per cent over 1933.

An inglorious record. One that can only be cut down by the persistent efforts of intelligent drivers to guard against speed, careless driving and, most important, driving after using intoxicants.

Hunting the Wild Deer

Be Careful With Firearms

In all the counties of the Bay State except Barnstable and Nantucket this week, deer may be hunted with shotguns or with bows and arrows.

The average city dweller is apt to think it superfluous to allow hunting deer with bows and arrows in 1934.

The fact is that Massachusetts can boast many good bow and arrow hunters.

They are far less apt to make a human bystander their target than are many of the shotgun hunters.

Finally, hunters, be careful with firearms.

They are likely to be far more dangerous to YOU than to the deer.

Is This Reassuring?

Prosecutors' Report to Warner

District attorneys from all over Massachusetts have reported to Attorney-General Warner that there is no crime increase in Massachusetts.

The fact that we read about too many crimes does not necessarily prove the district attorneys are wrong.

It DOES indicate, however, that something ought to be done about DECREASING the number of crimes of violence.

A real move in this direction would be much more reassuring than the report of no increase.

PLUGGING IN ON GOD

S'pose you want some percolator coffee—what do you do? You plug in on the electric connection. Bango!—back comes the "juice" and in a jiffy the water's boiling, the iron's hot, your friend is answering.

Elsie Robinson

What is that mysterious "juice"? What happened when you made that connection?

Unless you're an electrician you haven't the slightest idea—and even then you can't tell what electricity really is. But you don't need to know. Just shove in the plug, and the unseen power will do the rest.

MARY'S OWN STORY

But now suppose you want things which are far more precious than good coffee or a smooth shirt—happiness, confidence, success, peace of mind? How can you get these things?

"IN EXACTLY THE SAME WAY . . . BY PLUGGING IN," cries Mary Pickford. "I KNOW . . . FOR I'VE DONE IT MYSELF."

A tall statement? Yes . . . but "our Mary" has put it into the sanest, simplest, most comforting little book on the market today. "WHY NOT TRY GOD?" (H. C. Kinsey & Co., New York, publisher.) No matter who you are, you're going to like that book. It's Mary's own story.

Behind the plain words you can hear her brave laugh . . . see her own tears . . . touch her friendly hand. Perhaps that's why she makes God seem as practical and possible as any household fixture.

Who is God? Mary doesn't try to answer that. She doesn't even care whether you call that mysterious Power who has all the makings God. That Power, says she, will work, no matter what you call it. Just as the power behind the percolator works. All you need do is . . . PLUG IN!

THINGS WHAT YOU THINK

But how? With what? WITH YOUR THOUGHTS.

All your life you've been "plugging in" your thoughts. Thoughts are your only connection with life. Things have no meaning until you think about them. You put their meaning into them by thinking. Things ARE, FOR YOU, what you think they are. They're beautiful or ugly according to your own attitude.

Life is as you take it. Life is what you make it. You make it by your THOUGHTS. What do you get out of life? You get what you THINK . . . AND YOU CAN THINK WHATEVER YOU WANT TO THINK.

You've seen that proven a million times. Half a dozen people will be talking about some other person. Each of those people will see something different in that person. One, will see sweetness, another loneliness, one stupidity, another shrewdness, another malice, or another pride. And each judgment will be the truth. All of those attributes are in that person—BUT EACH CRITIC FINDS WHAT HE WISHES TO FIND.

UNLESS WE LET THEM

We think what we wish to think, and our life is whatever we think. We have no life save what we think, for we live in our own thoughts. OUR THOUGHTS ARE OUR LIFE . . . THEY'RE ALL WE GET OUT OF LIFE . . . THEY'RE THE ONLY LIFE WE HAVE.

Nobody else's thoughts can help us, and nobody else's thoughts can harm us. Splendid things—or dreadful things—may happen to us. But they can't happen IN us—they can't become part of our lives—unless we let them.

That's why some of the richest people are the most miserable—and some of the poorest and most afflicted are the happiest. It isn't what happens to you that counts—it's the way you take it. AND YOU CAN TAKE IT IN ANY WAY YOU WISH.

And so—says Mary Pickford—you can make your REAL life anything you wish it to be by your own thinking. AND IF YOU WISH GOD—PLUG IN GOD BY THINKING GOOD.

A GREAT IDEA

"God is a 24-hour station. All you need to do is plug in with your thinking. Truthful thinking. Good thinking. Kind thinking. Unselfish thinking. And then you can have and use all the love, all the power, all the courage, all the energy, all the cheerfulness, all the activity and all the kindliness of God."

A great idea—an unlimited idea. And you've been using it all your life—on the reverse. Plugging in on peevishness—thinking fear, thinking hate, thinking disaster and getting them back a hundred fold. Why not, just for a change, try plugging in on good?

A great book, Mary, thanks!

The Spotlight Seeker -:- -:- By Winifred Black

So Sistie and Buzzie don't want to live in the White House any more?

Winifred Black

Hurrah for them. They sound like real life, honest to goodness children.

Who would want to live in the White House or a Buckingham palace or at Windsor or in Mussolini's palace at Rome or in the Vatican, either, for that matter?

Even if you're full grown and can read and write and vote and play bridge, pinochle and everything.

I know a woman who would just love to live at the White House.

No, she wouldn't have to be the president's wife or daughter or sister or anything. She'd be content to bask in the reflected glory, but she certainly does love the glory.

She spends much more than she can afford when the opera season begins.

She doesn't care a hoot for music—I don't believe she knows the cry of the valkure from the peanut vender's song—but she does love the fuss and feathers and the shine and the glitter of the opera.

X MARKS THE WINDOW

The voice, the art, the melody mean nothing and less than nothing to her.

In her heart of hearts, she is dumb with amazement to see people enthuse over a prima donna with no more waistline than a prize ox at the county fair.

But art is art, don't you know and all that sort of thing. And, if people are going to be faddy about a middle aged woman or a fat, rather elderly man just because they can whoop like a couple of Comanches on the warpath, why nobody is going to be any faddier than she is.

And, oh, how she would love to say, "I'm spending a week or so at the White House." And the majordomo or whoever he is would have to lay in a fresh supply of stationery when she arrived.

She'd write home to Kokomo and to What Cheer and say "X shows the window of my own room and I wish you were here."

REGULAR YOUNGSTERS

Now Sistie and Buzzie don't care to write letters home to anybody and they don't want to have people turn around on I street and say, "There go Sistie and Buzzie, the White House children."

They just want to be good, healthy, noisy, natural children, bless their hearts and long life to them for it.

I do wish they could go to a nice old farm house I know 'way up in New Hampshire and go sleigh riding and make snow men and do a lot of snowballing and skating and oh, if they could just make molasses candy and have a chunk of hot ginger bread waiting for them when they came home, smoking like a pair of mettlesome young race horses.

The city is nothing to a healthy child—but a prison.

And to live in a prison within a prison, no matter how grand and elegant—what a fate?

Here's to you, Buzzie and Sistie. In the language of my good friend the elevator boy:

"I'm for you a million." Just like that.

TWO VIEWS OF A MAN

We have heard that men admired him
For his courage as a fighter
And the way, when burdens tired him,
He could grip them all the tighter.
For they paid such tribute to him
Which the outside world must render,
But the ones who loved him knew him
As a man whose heart was tender.

In the way men judge each other
Where the inner life is crusted
With the cares that fret and bother
He was one who could be trusted.
But they see with partial blindness
Who find only worldly splendor.
Now his loved ones miss his kindness
And his great heart, warm and tender.

Strange it seems that others raised him
To their topmost heights of glory,
But the deeds for which they praised him
Tell but partially the story,
For to those who loved him dearly
And to loneliness surrender,
He was more than honest merely.
He was patient, kind and tender.

Hendrik Van Loon

WRITES ABOUT

Kingfish in Politics

When the late Theodore Roosevelt (the cousin of the President) wrote his story of the Cuban campaign, Mr. Dooley, who was then going strong, reviewed the book under the caption "Alone in Cuba."

Hendrik Van Loon

It is a pity that Dr. Dooley has retired from the game, for we are about ready for another volume in the Theodorian vein. The author of this new opus is a gentleman by the name of Huey Pierce Long, born in Winfield, La., on August 30 of the year of grace 1893, and a nongraduate of the law schools of Oklahoma University and the Tulane ditto.

HARD TO DEFINE

His exact status at the present moment is not so easy to define. Let us merely mention among his many accomplishments that he instituted the paved road program for his native state and gave the children of that ancient French colony the benefit of free textbooks and a very wide degree of that literacy, which since time immemorial has been held the true bulwark of a perfect form of democracy.

This far Mr. Long has rarely appeared before the public in the role of an author, confining himself almost exclusively to a very specific and special form of Public Speaking, which is extremely successful in stirring up the masses.

But one of these days a bright publisher will ask the Senator-Governor for a book in which he will be expected to explain his exact theories of government, and I can think of no more fitting title for that masterpiece than "Alone In the United States."

For there have been many curious chapters writ in the History of our Nation, but none to surpass the incredible and grotesque show now being put on by the first citizen of the sovereign state of Louisiana.

The Communist boys play the game according to certain obscure rules of their own, which will never be quite clear to the majority of their fellow-citizens. Whereas, the Hon. Huey Pierce Long not only knows the native vernacular inside, outside, skinside outside, skinside inside, but is suggesting new and pleasant little by-plays that make a direct and undeniable appeal to all those who feel that fate has not given them a square deal and that something ought to be done about it.

PERTINENT QUESTION

Therefore, when at some gathering of the Comfortable and the Contented I hear it said, "Oh, the Kingfish! Why, he is just a false alarm, a lot of noise . . . there is nothing to him." I invariably ask the question whether anybody present has ever heard the famous Kingfish.

Of course, nobody ever has. The very idea is repulsive to their better emotions. They would not think of such a thing.

And that is where they make their mistake. For Long thrives upon the hatred of the rich and the gentle-born and those who still believe that the English language and the Constitution enjoy certain inalienable rights which ought to be respected at all costs.

He makes a collection of all the bad names he has ever been called and he enumerates them to his delighted audiences to show them just exactly what his enemies, who are also the enemies of the common people, think of them and of him.

Then he indulges in his one and only argument, that (so he fondly hopes) will eventually carry him to the big white house at the crossing of Pennsylvania avenue and Sixteenth street in Washington. And that argument preaches a gospel based upon just exactly one sentence: There must be a complete redistribution of all the wealth of the nation.

* * *

That which Karl Marx in his wildest dreams never quite dared to advocate, Long has made the basis of his own political program—the complete redistribution of all the existing wealth.

I don't think that he has ever yet figured out how this is to be accomplished. But his loyal and fanatical followers are not interested in such unimportant details.

You may hate this little fellow all you want, and you may despise him if you must. But do not underrate him. For that is exactly what he wants you to do.

Human Side of the News

Worship of Conquest

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

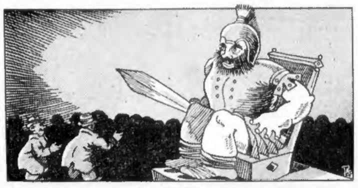
When Julius Caesar went north with his legions into the Germanic country, he found that its tribes had a god of their own, named Wotan, who was a combination of the Roman deities, Jupiter and Mars.

They offered human sacrifices to him, they dedicated the enemy's army to him, which meant its entire destruction, if overcome, and they believed that he sat in the great Valhalla, attended by the Valkyrie, where he received all the dead warriors and enlisted them in service.

As Winston Churchill has been saying recently, a visitor to Germany today will find a strong movement, fostered by an influential element, which aims to bring the people of that country back to the ideas of their ancestors; to the worship of might and conquest.

TO RULE THE WORLD

In 70 Wilhelmstrasse, Berlin, sits the head of this movement, Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, than whom none is closer to Adolph Hitler. He is the philosophic dictator of Nazism and the arch-foe of Christianity and Judaism.



His aim is the creation of a super-race — "Herrenrasse" — to rule the world. He believes with Nietzsche that Christianity and Judaism are the refuge of weaklings, cowards who fear to carve out their own destiny.

Even the Ten Commandments are not wanted, presumably because the Bible teaches that they came down to Moses, a leader of the Jews. Another reason is the fifth of the ten, which reads: "Thou shalt not kill!" Dr. Rosenberg's adherents have a substitute of nine commandments for the decalogue, and these are as follows:

1. Honor the Deity.
2. Honor ancestors and posterity.
3. Honor the great of thy people.
4. Honor thy father and mother.
5. Keep thyself pure.
6. Be faithful to thy people.
7. Steal not.
8. Be truthful.
9. Be helpful to the noble.

It is doubtful that Dr. Rosenberg, or his followers, subscribe to the first, unless with the reservation as to whom their deity is.

CHRISTIANS ALARMED

The Catholics and the Evangelical sects are convinced that their opponents want to plunge the country into paganism, and their alarm is so great that the Catholics are proposing a union of Christian forces to combat the common enemy.

Rosenberg is a young man, just turned forty. He was born a Russian citizen in Estonia, but traces his ancestry back to the Teutonic feudal lords.

After serving in the Russian army he fled to Germany when the Communist revolution broke out. He hooked up with Hitler in Bavaria during the early stages of the Nazi movement, and soon was the chief propagandist and pamphleteer for the overthrow of the republic.

More than Goering, they say, he is the man behind Hitler. Some think that he would have been the leader if he had any power of eloquence or appeal to the masses.

In his own sphere he assumed unlimited power and, if he can force it, he will have the masses worshipping the dead of the great war as their gods and none other.
